Yanks Make New Gains; British Launch Big Drive

ALLIES WARNED TO FACE STALIN ON POLISH DEAL

Peace Is at Stake, Britons Told.

BY LARRY RUE.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

LONDON, July 30.—The long feared crisis in Polish-soviet relations has arrived with soviet recognition of the Moscow Polish committee of national liberation as the provisional government of Poland while the Russians are driving toward Warsaw. It poses serious problems for Britain and America, responsible newspapers and periodicals in Britain admit.

Long articles are devoted to the subject, but the trend is that neither the United States nor Britain can afford to have Moscow dismiss so lightly the government they have been recognizing as the legal regime of Poland.

The Weekly Economist says: "The situation is extremely serious." It emphasizes the fact the Polish government in London directs the underground resistance to the Germans in a greater part of Poland. It declared British and American "recognition of Mikolajczyk's government is full and firm and they must reject the new [Moscow] committee's claim to governmental status however provisional."

[Premier Stanislaw Mikolajczyk is en route from London to Russia to confer with Stalin on the problem of jurisdiction in liberated Polish territory.]

Duty to Tell Stalin.

While condemning the Polish government here for having adopted a policy of "drift," the Economist concedes that Russia herself has not been helpful in seeking an agreement. It warns against "retrospects and recriminations," but insists that it will not be possible for the British and American governments to follow Dictator Stalin's example and says, "they will have no option but to make this plain to their Russian ally."

It asserts the Moscow committee is "altogether unrepresentative" of the Polish people and the committee's claim is based mainly upon the full support of the "triumphant Red army."

"The full force of British and American persuasion on Moscow to prevent the road of reconciliation from being incurably blocked" is urged as the essential first step.

Fate Again in Poland.

The Conservative Sunday Observer comments: "Once again, as five years ago, the fate of Europe may be settled in Poland." In the present dispute between Poland and Moscow, it says, "the strength of grand alliance principles of the united nations and the character of the peace to come are involved."

The Observer admits Stalin has the power to adopt any policy he chooses, but says the most important fact is that the "people of Poland, if their liberation is to be real, are entitled to choose for themselves freely what rulers they will have." It asserts the Moscow committee has made a bid for popular support by its land reform program and "demand for large annexations of German land and population in the west." The latter, it declares, tho "against the interest of both Poland and peace will attract many Poles."

Hope for a Settlement.

The Polish government in London insists its land reform program is more liberal than the soviet scheme.

The Observer expresses hope that Premier Mikolajczyk's concession to accept provisionally the Curzon line as a basis for discussion will satisfy Stalin. It warns, however, that the "legal claims of the Mikolajczyk government are unassailable and if Marshal Stalin finally rejects them out of hand he will do irreparable harm to the rights of national and international peace."

Turkey Sees War; May Act on Wednesday

BY SAM BREWER.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

ISTANBUL, Turkey, July 29 [Delayed].—Turkey was in the throes of a crisis today and all circles were discussing whether it would mean a break with Germany and war.

The German embassy here was like a beehive as occupants bundled luggage into taxis for a trip to Ankara. The Italian embassy was ordered to return to Ankara and the German ambassador, Franz von Papen, flew there last night.

The climax of the crisis will come on Wednesday when the national assembly meets. The governmental party's parliamentary committee will meet on Tuesday and any big decision will be made then. There are unconfirmed reports, even in German circles, that Turkey will grant air and sea bases to the allies.

[An Associated Press dispatch from London said DNB, German official news agency, declared the Turkish national assembly would be informed on Wednesday of the government's decision to break diplomatic and economic relations with Germany. DNB gave Russian sources in Sofia, Bulgaria, as its authority. Istanbul dispatches to London said German diplomatic officials there had booked passage from Turkey.]

Man in Street Expects War.

The situation has passed from the point where the man in the street asks whether Turkey will enter the war. He now says, "When?"

Allied military circles say they do not need Turkey in the war, and observers declare all war supplies, except foodstuffs, will have to be provided by Turkey's allies if she begins fighting.

Many believe Turkey wants to get into the war to show her sympathy for the allies and hopes for consequent benefits. The German defeats on the eastern front have caused a powerful impression here.

Romanian Parley Called.

Marshal Ion Antonescu has summoned all Romanian military attaches to Bucharest for a conference on the country's critical military situation, a well informed Romanian source here said.

The conference follows the failure of an attempt by the marshal to persuade opposition leaders to take a share in the government, according to the informant. He added that political circles in Bucharest declared Antonescu was considering stepping out of the picture if he could find a successor capable of forming a national coalition government to try to get Romania out of her predicament.

Romanian circles here deny that a Romanian delegation has gone to Moscow in an effort to negotiate peace. They feel Romania's future lies in Russia's hands and one suggestion is that former Foreign Minister Grigore Gafencu, who is friendlier to Russia than any other Romanian statesman, should be given a chance to form a cabinet.

NAZIS WITHDRAW 7 DIVISIONS FROM YUGOSLAV FRONT

BARI, Italy, July 30 (AP).—Germany has withdrawn nearly all first line troops from Yugoslavia, and is reshuffling the remainder to mask new northward movements, it is reported here.

Seventeen German divisions were in the country July 1, but only 10 remain now—all but one of them second rate units, and the force now opposing Marshal Tito's Yugoslav Partisans is less than 350,000 men, the report said. This force includes an Albanian and three Bulgarian divisions, and scattered Quisling units.

Gen. Baron Maxmilian von Weichs, Nazi commander, is said to have moved his headquarters northward from Belgrade to Zagreb.

"Nazis Seek Time," Berlin Says.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

LONDON, July 31 [Monday].—This new comment on the total mobilization of German labor was made today by a military commentator on the German radio:

"The German leadership in the east is based on two principles—first it is of primary importance to gain as much time as possible so as to bring up new forces, and secondly new weapons are being devised which will add strength of our front.

"Everybody in Germany is talking of the new mobilization measures. They will hold on until the new weapons are brought into action, is the general comment."

FOUR INJURED AS '400' TRAIN IS DERAILED AT MILWAUKEE STATION

Milwaukee, Wis., July 30 [Special].—Four persons were slightly injured here tonight when four cars of one of the Chicago and North Western road's "400" streamliner, bound for Chicago from Minneapolis, was derailed while approaching the station.

A coupling dropped from the fourth car of the train and was wedged against a rail in such manner as to close a switch over which the train was passing, railroad men said. The next four cars left the rails but did not overturn. Chicago passengers were transferred to another train and continued their journey.

DRIVERS STRIKE, 1,100 GALLONS OF MILK SPOIL

Eleven hundred gallons of milk, cream, and ice cream worth $1,500 have spoiled at the Arlington Heights plant of the Pet Milk company as a result of a wagon drivers' strike since Wednesday, John Randag, plant manager, reported yesterday. Randag said the supply was condemned by a state food inspector as "unfit for human consumption" and would be dumped.

The Milk Wagon Drivers' union [AFL] seeks a contract for drivers who make wholesale deliveries to stores. Randag, who says "it's up to the war labor board," to which the matter has been certified, asserted the drivers are asking for home delivery commissions on wholesale routes. Payment on this basis, he said, would run the drivers' salaries up to about $10,000 a year on a six day week basis.

Weird Force Hurls 650 Foot Span in River

Chester, Ill., July 30 [Special]—As an aftermath of a violent storm, the Mississippi river was blocked here today by the steel superstructure of Chester's 2 year old highway toll bridge.

Comprising the two center spans of the bridge, the superstructure is 650 feet long, 26 feet wide and 90 feet high.

A mysterious natural force, thought by some to have been a super-powerful bolt of lightning and by others to have been a tornado, lifted the superstructure from its moorings during a fierce rain and electrical storm last night and tossed it into the river.

Piers Not Damaged.

So cleanly was the gigantic trestle lifted from its foundations that its supporting piers were not damaged, John A. File, chairman of the Chester toll bridge commission, said today.

The bridge has two approaches, each approximately 300 feet in length. Undamaged, these approaches jutted into the river today from the Illinois and Missouri sides. File said expansion joints at the end of the approaches remained intact and that the bridge had been "lifted cleanly at the joints."

In the water below the bridge, the half submerged superstructure, apparently intact, presented authorities with unprecedented problems in regard to salvage and to restoring navigation. Barge and steamship traffic was at a halt with the deep water channel completely blocked.

Cause Remains a Mystery.

File said the cause of the crash remains a mystery. All that is known is that the two center spans of the bridge toppled into the river during the height of a storm which struck the city about 9:30 p. m. Lightning flashes of unusual intensity were noticed and a driving rain was accompanied by high wind, File said, but the city itself did not experience wind of tornadic violence.

Just before the bridge crashed, a terrific burst of thunder followed a blinding lightning flash in the vicinity of the river, File said. Absence of marks on the superstructure and the piers tended today to eliminate the theory that the damage was caused by lightning. Police Chief Earl Stoffel advanced the theory that a tornado had swooped on the bridge from the Illinois bluffs. However, there was no evidence of other tornado damage in the vicinity.

Henry Gross, Chester insurance man, was the first motorist to approach the bridge from the Missouri side after the mishap, File said, and was saved from plunging into the river by a hunch which caused him to stop his car within three feet of the end of the approach.

Communications Cut.

Gross, with his wife and two children in the car, was driving slowly thru the rain when he arrived at the bridge about 10 minutes after the spans had fallen. Bridge men on the Illinois side had been cut off from communication with the Missouri side and had been unable to direct a closing of the highway.

Gross said he drove slowly onto the bridge approach and noticed that the railing on one side was torn away. He stopped the car and stepped out to investigate. A yard in front of his automobile, he said, the bridge ended in a sheer drop to the water. He backed the car down the approach and placed it across the highway to bar other motorists.

The bridge was owned and operated by the city of Chester. It was completed in 1942 at a cost of $1,350,000 and was insured for $1,200,000. It was the only span over the Mississippi between St. Louis and Cape Girardeau.

53 IN HAMMOND THREATEN TIE-UP AT WATER WORKS

Fifty-three employes of the Hammond, Ind., water works and sanitary district will quit their jobs at midnight tonight unless Mayor G. Bertram Smith promises to recommend a $20 a month pay increase for them in Hammond's 1945 budget.

The ultimatum was served on Mayor Smith by S. C. Stevens, business agent of the International Operating Engineers, local 8,464 [AFL], of which the men are members.

"This is not to be a strike in any sense of the word," Stevens said.

Albert D. Millard, a member of the Hammond sanitary board, said "something would be done" to provide Hammond with water service if the workers leave their jobs.

A walkout would necessitate throwing Hammond sewage into Lake Michigan untreated and would cut off water supply from the Pullman-Standard Manufacturing company, in addition to the towns of Highland and Munster, Ind., and Lansing, Ill.

REDS SMASH AHEAD ON 68 MI. FRONT; U.S. TROOPS PUSH DEEPER INTO FRANCE

Stalin's Men Move Nearer to Riga and Kaunas.

LONDON, July 31 [Monday]—(AP).—Gen. Ivan Cherniakhovsky, 37 year old Jewish tank expert, yesterday sent his 3d White Russian army troops crashing seven miles into the Suwalki triangle of German East Prussia in a sudden offensive which hurled the enemy out of 300 towns and villages on a 68 mile front.

A Moscow bulletin announced the capture of Giby, seven miles inside the Suwalki triangle, which Germany took from conquered Poland in 1939 and annexed to East Prussia.

The Russians under Cherniakhovsky, one of the youngest soviet military leaders, were within 24 miles of German East Prussia proper. Berlin also told of a major soviet assault in the Augustow sector, 21 miles southwest of Giby and only eight miles from pre-war German East Prussia, but this was not confirmed by Moscow.

Gain Up to 15 Miles.

Smashing thru the German lines in gains up to 15 miles, Cherniakhovsky's northern wing of troops battered their way thru Shlyanova, only five miles east of Kaunas, former Lithuanian capital, and Bobikly, less than five miles southeast of the city.

The fall of Kaunas was regarded as imminent since other soviet forces are attacking within six miles northeast of the city.

Cherniakhovsky's men launched their attack west of the Niemen river from Kaunas southward thru Alytus, after establishing bridgeheads across the river in the last two weeks. Most sectors are within 35 miles of East Prussia proper.

The crossing into East Prussia was announced only casually in a soviet bulletin. Giby is 17 miles southeast of Suwalki and 24 miles east of the pre-war East Prussian border.

North of this offensive another Russian push was under way in Latvia, and soviet troops plunging to within 25 miles of the Gulf of Riga were believed to have an excellent chance of closing a trap on 200,000 to 300,000 Germans.

Push Nearer Jelgava Railway.

Already halfway across Latvia in their broad sweep northward from Lithuania, the 1st Baltic army under Gen. Ivan Bagramian captured 300 Latvian towns and villages, including Giuda, eight miles southwest of Jelgava and 25 miles from the Gulf of Riga.

Conquest of the intervening territory would split the Nazi armies of the Baltic and trap the Germans in Estonia and Latvia, London military men said.

Besides taking Giuda, the Russians also captured Platone and Lielvircava, both six miles south of Jelgava, the imperiled six way rail junction which controls German escape routes out of Estonia and Latvia to East Prussia.

On the southern Estonian front Gen. Ivan Maslennikov's 3d Baltic army was well inside the Estonian frontier west and southwest of Pskov. Capture of 100 localities in that area was announced.

Warsaw Action in Doubt.

Moscow's bulletin, announcing the capture of 1,144 towns and villages on a 1,000 mile winding front from the Baltic to the Carpathian mountain approaches to Czechoslovakia, did not even mention the Warsaw area, where soviet troops of the center are fighting within sight of the polish capital. A dispatch said the Russians had repulsed a series of bitter counter-attacks.

Berlin again said soviet troops had crossed the Vistula river below Warsaw, but said they had been hurled back.

It was possible that the Russians were holding up their assault on Warsaw until Gen. Cherniakhovsky's troops plunge farther into German East Prussia and thus protect the northern flank of the armies under Marshal Konstantin K. Rokossovsky and Gen. G. F. Zakharov.

WRECKED NAZI ARMOR LITTERS NORMAN ROADS

BY JOHN THOMPSON.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

RONCEY, France, July 30.—In the rubble of this burning village and along five roads and lanes radiating from it is the wreckage of hundreds of German guns, trucks, armored cars, and scores of tanks. They were destroyed yesterday by American planes in the greatest mechanized mass slaughter of the campaign.

Second Lt. Charles Henderson, 4824 N. Damen av., Chicago, military policeman directing traffic thru the village square, said engineers had counted the charred hulks of 504 vehicles and 77 tanks. On one road alone I counted 83 wrecked or burned guns, trucks, tanks, staff cars, cook wagons, motorcycles, and flak wagons, everything, in fact, from a bicycle to a Tiger tank.

Adding to this almost incredible scene, which had to be viewed to be believed, were Germans filing a prisoner cage just off the village square and overflowing in the street. All day long they came in, herded by soldiers, or surrendering under white flags.

Best German Troops.

These were no impressed soldiers from Russia, Poland, or middle Europe. They were so-called elite men from the 2d panzer SS division, known as the "Das Reich," and from Germany's crack paratroop divisions.

The disorganization of the German rear was so complete that 17 German paratroopers surrendered to this correspondent and three colleagues.

The air force claimed 64 tanks destroyed, 55 damaged, 204 motor vehicles destroyed, 45 damaged, and 11 probably damaged. Our planes had caught the German columns rushing thru the bottleneck of Roncey, trying to escape by back roads to the south in almost their last desperate effort to break out of Gen. Bradley's trap.

Push Wrecks Off Road.

In peace time, Roncey probably never saw a tourist. But yesterday it assumed importance by being situated six miles southeast of Coutances on escape routes leading to Gavrbay and Hambye. Much of the wreckage had been shoved off the roads, for our own armored columns had to roll thru Roncey.

So before the armor could roll, in came armored bulldozers. Within 22 minutes on one main road thru the town, said Lt. Henderson, the dozers had pushed 114 vehicles to one side, clearing a lane for tanks, self-propelled guns, and tank destroyers.

The sight of a country lane, still uncleared, was even more amazing. Fighter bombers had caught a column just on the edge of town and their bombs put perfect craters right down the center of the road. Then they came again with more fighters to strafe, for we saw hundreds of machine gun holes in the jumble of burned out metal.

Jammed together on the edge of town were three self-propelled 88 mm. guns. Just ahead of them were two huge dual purpose towed 88s. And on down the column the sight was the same.

French Are Dressed Up.

Up a narrow lane came the incongruity of war. French farmer folk in their best clothes, for this was Sunday, strolled along, looking at the massed wreckage of German might. Little girls in starched blue and white dresses; old granddads

Normandy Line's Center Broken by English.

BY LARRY RUE.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

SUPREME HDQ., ALLIED EXPEDITIONARY FORCE, July 31 [Monday].—Taking the towns of Brehal, Gavray, and Percy, all about 11 miles south and southeast of Coutances, American troops in Normandy were by-passing Granville and sweeping on toward Avranches last night.

Coincident with the smashing American assault, British and Canadian forces on the center of the Normandy front launched an offensive that surged thru the Germans' first line defenses on a seven mile front for gains of up to 4½ miles. This drive in the Caumont sector was speeding forward at the rate of a mile an hour, had plunged to the enemy's secondary defense positions, and still was rolling last night.

Yanks Gain 7 Miles.

Their momentum in the western sector still has not been checked and last reports indicated American armor was going "hell for leather" toward Avranches. Conservative estimates indicate they have captured more than 10,000 prisoners since their offensive began last Tuesday. This does not include elements of three German divisions encircled in the areas of Lengronne and St. Denis le Gast.

Three determined enemy attacks to break out of this encirclement were frustrated and more than 30 tanks, including six 60 ton Tigers, were knocked out. These boosted to more than 400 the number of Nazi tanks knocked out since Tuesday.

Battle Along Tessy Line.

At the same time the enemy unsuccessfully launched a strong counter-attack in the Tessy-sur-Vire area, where a big battle still is progressing on a three mile arc from Tessy to Percy.

The American line, which now is linked up by our infantry, was described as roughly from Brehal to Cerences, thence to Gavray and on to Tessy. There are a few enemy pockets of resistance behind these lines. They varied from small groups to units of a hundred men or so. Mopping up, however, was proceeding rapidly.

In the breakout attempts the Germans lost many dead, tho some enemy infantry may have slipped thru to the south before the American advance units established solid contact all the way across the front.

Seize 2,000 Nazis in Day.

More than 2,000 prisoners were claimed yesterday. More than 1,100 were taken the day before. Previously more than 6,300 had been bagged since Tuesday.

While the American troops were threatening to unhinge the German left flank at Avranches, the British troops broke into the crust of prepared German defenses on a seven mile front east and south of Caumont. In the south they made an advance of 4½ miles. On the east and northeast their gains were estimated at from 1,000 to 2,000 yards.

Gen. Montgomery expressed great satisfaction with the progress of the battle thruout the allied front and gave assurances that "the operations are proceeding according to plan." He referred to the gains made by the British as being "some miles to the south" of Caumont.

British Take Over U. S. Sector.

Famed and battle hardened British infantry units with tank support had secretly replaced the Americans holding the Caumont sector in the middle of the Normandy front. They launched their attack at dawn yesterday on the German bulge created by the sweeping American offensive in the west. The British swarmed into the seven mile valley south of Caumont. In this sector they encountered comparatively light resistance.

The attack was led by 1,000 royal air force Lancasters and Halifaxes, followed by medium bombers. They bombed from 2,000 feet, below heavy clouds. In the first few hours the British gained more than a mile to the village of Sept-Vents [seven winds].

Hundreds of guns pounded the German positions in the hedgebound Normandy countryside as the great fleets of heavy, medium, light, and fighter bombers flew an aerial barrage to support the ground forces.

Push Thru Minefields.

Correspondents reported the attack was supported by a vast accumulation of troops and material recently moved westward from the Caen area.

On the left wing of the British advance, minefields and deep defenses were encountered. Despite this a limited gain of about a mile was speedily made on a two mile front near St. Vaast-sur-Deulles, about three miles south of Tilly.

Among the towns taken by the British were St. Jean-Brecu des Essartiers, 3½ miles southwest of Caumont and Les Loges.

Third Army Corps in Action.

SUPREME HDQ., ALLIED EXPEDITIONARY FORCE, July 30 (AP).—The American smash that broke the enemy's lines on the west was delivered by the 19th corps, and possibly other units, it was announced officially. Four more infantry and two armored divisions were identified in action, altho not necessarily connected with the 19th corps.

These divisions were the 1st, 4th, 9th, and 30th infantry and the 2d and 3d armored, the first armored divisions to be announced officially in the invasion.

The 2d armored division, trained by Lt. Gen. George S. Patton in the California desert, also spearheaded the American invasion of French Morocco and Sicily. The 3d, which includes 400 men from Illinois and an equal number from Michigan, Wisconsin, and Iowa, was activated at Camp Beauregard, La., in 1941 and this was its first combat action.

Maj. Gen. Clarence E. Huebner's 1st division took part previously in the drive to Caumont. Maj. Gen. Raymond O. Barton's 4th infantry and Maj. Gen. Manton S. Eddy's 9th infantry were in on the capture of Cherbourg.

The 19th corps is the third to be identified in France. Others are Maj. Gen. Leonard T. Gerow's 5th, and Maj. Gen. Joseph Collins' 7th. The 19th is commanded by Maj. Gen. Charles Corlett.

NAZI WAR BULLETIN.

Of France, yesterday's broadcast German war report said:

"North American attempts at breaking thru continued all day yesterday on both sides of the River Vire, at Moyon and in the sector of Beaucoudray-Percy. They were repulsed everywhere in embittered fighting. Twenty-eight tanks were knocked out and seven aircraft were shot down by army units.

"On the western wing our divisions, which were temporarily separated from the main forces, broke thru the enemy lines from Coutances in a southerly direction and moved into fresh positions in the area of Gavray-Trelly.

"On the other front of the landing head the enemy only made one unsuccessful local attack south of Juvigny.

"Fighter and battle plane formations shot down six enemy airplanes. During the night strong formations of heavy bombers launched effective attacks against enemy deployments southeast of Caen and in the area southwest of St. Lo."

British Push Back Nazis; Yank Advance Continues

Cheering French Help Round Up Nazis.

BY HAL BOYLE.

BREHAL, France, July 30 (AP).—Rose garlanded Sherman tanks, rumbling thru lanes of cheering civilians, cracked the German rear guard defenses and rolled south thru this coastal village today as knife brandishing French youths helped round up hundreds of pocketed Nazi troops.

Not since the Tunisian campaign have American troops received such a heroes' welcome.

This long column of armor is decorated from head to foot with red and white roses and hydrangeas are showered on them by thousands of laughing and weeping French men, women, and children.

Like Medieval Pageant.

It has been a veritable "battle of flowers," but blood has been spilled, too, and the whole coastal march is like some colorful pageant from French medieval history.

The Germans tried to make a delaying stand north of Brehal to enable trapped elements to pull out thru the fishing port of Granville, but Lt. Gen. Omar N. Bradley's vast mobile wedge speared thru them and is hot on the trail of escaping remnants.

As soon as the last groups of Nazis began their frantic withdrawal, French homes patriotically broke out tricolor flags. Many American vehicles are riding into battle with French flags tied to them.

Seize Hundreds of Prisoners.

During the thrust from Coutances, thru rolling hills bordered by the sea, the tankmen became encumbered with hundreds of prisoners—more than they could handle comfortably.

"French boys with knives rounded up some and brought them in," said Lt. Walter Rapp of New York, who is burdened with 84 prisoners and trying to talk another officer out of dumping another batch in his hands.

"One French farmer captured 20 Germans hiding in his barn. All enemy units have been depleted by terrific casualties. Few have any fuel, food, or morale."

Maywood Officer There.

Lt. Kenneth Mower of Maywood, Ill., said Germans manning anti-tank guns had fired on a group of their own men who had surrendered.

"They knew they were firing on their own men because the prisoners still were carrying white flags," he said.

Occasional snipers fired from the woods, but most of the Nazis—pale, unshaven, rumpled, and hungry—walked in to surrender.

Speed Spares Villages.

Because of the speed of the advance near-by villages bore little signs of shell and bomb damage. At one the mayor said: "I have just ripped down all the German posters. Give me some American posters."

The crowd cheered as he tacked them up. Overhead waved a home made American flag fashioned from old tri-colors.

BY DREW MIDDLETON.
(By Wireless to the New York Times and The Chicago Tribune.)

CHERBOURG, France, July 30.—Cherbourg is slowly and laboriously recovering from the economic and political effects of four years of German occupation. French officials of the provisional government of Gen. De Gaulle and allied civil affairs officers have made considerable head way in the last five weeks but this town is far from normal.

As Cherburg is one of the chief supply ports for the allies, normalcy is out of the question until after the war. American military and naval establishments here are large.

Because its people are just beginning to shake off the political apathy that has gripped them since the German surrender the food problem is the most pressing at the moment.

Demand for More Bread.

Many of the French feel that they now are worse off so far as food is concerned than they were during the German occupation. They assert that a bread allowance of 300 grams each day was maintained by the Nazis almost to the end, but that they are getting far less than that from the allies. Steps are being taken to increase the bread ration.

This complaint about the bread is a small point in Cherbourg where the people have been fairly well fed, but it will be of much greater significance when the allies take a large city whose people have been on the edge of starvation.

The French also complain the allies should provide more potatoes, coffee, sugar, and tea. More meat, green vegetables, and fish are available in shops of the poorer sections of Cherbourg than in many similar neighborhoods in London.

Slow to Accept De Gaulle.

French officials are surprised at the slow growth of the De Gaullist movement in Cherbourg. Almost all accept Gen. De Gaulle as a symbol of resistance but enrollment in the fighting French movement has been slow. There is a feeling among those who stayed in France during the four years of occupation that they deserve an equal place in the reconstruction of the nation with those De Gaullists who organized the resistance in London and Algiers.

Most striking sign of a reawakening of political life in Cherbourg is a poster issued by the executive committee of the Socialist party. The appears on walls and German pill boxes. It calls for a "provisional but stable government" under direction of De Gaulle. [He is not called "general"], but it adds that he should be surrounded by representatives of all parties.

Anti-Jewish Feeling.

The Socialists want a strongly organized republic.

There is little anti-Jewish sentiment in Cherbourg according to the De Gaullists, who in the next breath say it would be well if Jews remained outside of public life for the present. Anti-Jewish propaganda of both Vichy, and the Germans has left its mark on the French people.

Generally this correspondent found that political rehabilitation of the French has progressed much further in five weeks in Cherbourg than in five months in Algiers.

Few Arrests Noted.

There have been no wholesale arrests and executions of collaborationists but the most dangerous have been rounded up and jailed.

The number of men and women who have been arrested and executed is probably larger than the figures given out by authorities. The reason is that there are no less than four French police forces operating in Cherbourg without much liaison.

There are still a considerable number of pictures of Marsnal Petain in homes. Many of the French with whom I have talked, regard Petain as a "poor old man" who did the best he could.

Two Draining Automobile Are Burned by Explosion

Douglas Phelps, 49, 6239 Evans av., Negro, and Joseph W. Thomas, 41, of 4522 N. Racine av., a mechanic, were burned yesterday in an explosion and fire in the New Lawrence garage at 4551 Kenmore av., when the men, standing in a grease pit, were draining gasoline from Phelps' automobile. Phelps, trapped in the pit, was rescued by Anthony Morris, 1207 Leland av., a cab driver.

with white beards; young men stiff and awkward in their unaccustomed store clothes, halted us to laugh and talk. One woman, wearing a widow's black, grasped my hand and said over and over again, "Bon jour, liberateur." [Good day, liberator].

And still we passed more wrecks. Almost every one was burned, its metal riddled with bullet holes. Two deep black kettles, one full of spaghetti and the other containing two hams, lay amid the litter of a kitchen truck. Rifles and helmets filled ditches. Everywhere lay soldiers' overcoats, many with SS collar tabs.

We passed a farmhouse. In the yard was another wrecked truck and two German jeeps. Inside one sat two little girls about 2 and 3 years old. One kept pushing her foot against the starter, which whirled noisily.

17 Germans Surrender.

And still wreckage lined this road, sunken between high hedgerows. We were examining the ruins of one gun when below us, coming up the lane, we saw 17 German soldiers marching behind a noncommissioned officer carrying a white flag.

We paused, looked at each other, and laughed nervously. I shouted, "Halt." They did. I asked if any one spoke English. None of them did.

The situation seemed to call for positive action. Henry T. Gorrell of the United Press and I started frisking them for weapons. Howard Austin of the Sydney [Australia] Morning Herald started examining their safe conduct pass, one of our propaganda leaflets, while Robert J. Casey of the Chicago Daily News looked on with amusement.

Sends Them Up Road.

Using my other German phrase, I ordered, "Macht schnell!" and pointed back up the road, and they started back docilely, still with their hands up.

A farmer said he thought there might be some other Germans down the road who might not want to surrender. On we went, but encountered no more Germans.

Back toward town we made our way, seeing again the example of what planes can do to a mechanized force trapped on a roadway. Nothing had escaped their bullets except an ancient, black, horse drawn hearse which rested untouched in an old garage.

Prisoners Youthful.

Two Chicago engineers, Corporals Leon Koza, 2217 Southport av., and Charles Welzien, 3127 Komensky av., had paused from their labors for a glass of wine with a Polish speaking Frenchman in what had been the local grog shop. Across the street, Pvt. James Brocka, 504 W. 42d pl., Chicago, helped Lt. Henderson sort out more and more prisoners.

The average age of German prisoners is between 16 and 19, and between 39 and 43, the latter usually from labor battalions.

The men were Paige Abbott, photographer, of San Francisco, and Clinton Green, correspondent, of Providence, R. I.

Raid Air Fields

ALLIED HDQ., New Guinea, July 31 [Monday] (AP).—Gen. MacArthur's Liberators smashed four Japanese airdromes in the Sorong sector at the northwest tip of Dutch New Guinea in a heavy raid announced today.

The planes attacked Moemi, Sagan, Otawire, and Utarom airstrips Saturday, almost nullifying Japan's remaining air strength on New Guinea.

Mitchell medium bombers bombed and strafed the east coast of Halmahera, between New Guinea and the Philippines. The attack was a followup to a raid Thursday when allied planes shot down 15 Japanese planes over Halmahera and destroyed 30 on the ground.

MacArthur's bulletin also disclosed that 1,385 Japanese dead have been counted since July 22 east of Aitape, where an enemy force has been attempting to break thru American lines. The total enemy dead in the Aitape-Wewak sector since July 11 now stands at 2,859.

ALLIES GET NEW REPORTS ABOUT ROMMEL DEATH

WITH U. S. 1ST ARMY IN FRANCE, July 30 (AP).—An American staff officer today said information from French civilians coincided with reports of German prisoners that Field Marshal Erwin Rommel had died of wounds received in a strafing on the Caen front.

Details given by French civilians, the officer said, strengthened the report of the German marshal's death but it was not yet considered "certain." According to the reports, Rommel was shot several times in the lungs by an allied plane and then struck his head when his car overturned.

"Whether he is dead or not makes little difference," the officer added. "With the wounds he received it is pretty certain he is not commanding any army."

NAZIS PUT FIVE DIVISIONS INTO FLORENCE FIGHT

Report Tower Shelled

New York, July 30 (AP).—The German radio said tonight allied batteries had started shelling the Leaning Tower of Pisa on the contention the Germans were using it as an observation post. German military quarters, said the broadcast, denied using the tower as an observation post and claimed there was no military installation in its vicinity. It added that if the famed building is destroyed "the allies alone are responsible." There was no allied confirmation that the tower was being shelled.

ROME, Italy, July 30 (AP).—The Germans threw five battered divisions today into the battle of Florence, great Tuscan art center within sight of the 8th army fighting up thru the mountains.

Once again the allies were faced with the possible necessity of firing on a storehouse of art and culture. The enemy was setting up a heavy gun battery in the southern outskirts of the city made famous by Dante, Michelangelo, Petrarch, Boccaccio, Savanarola, and the Medicis.

Tightening their ring about the city of 350,000, the British were seven miles away at San Michele on the southwest and 10 miles away on the south at the battlefield of Mount Scalari, highest point in the area.

British Left Wing Moves Up.

The enemy, however, still held out firmly at Montelupo, five miles east of Empoli. Here, at the confluence of the Arno and Pesa rivers, the Germans were making a strong stand and the British still were two miles below the city.

All enemy outposts south of the Arno and the Pesa in this sector have been cleared out and patrols are active north of these rivers.

Foe Strengthens Line.

To the southeast, above Arezzo, the British reported a number of gains, and Italian troops beat off two counter-attacks on the Adriatic coast.

Activity on the 5th army front before Pisa and along the Arno in both directions was limited to artillery duels and patrol skirmishes.

[Germany's broadcast war bulletin said: "Our troops again smashed all attacks made by the enemy with Indian, South African, New Zealand, and English divisions, in order to break thru toward Florence. The opponent, who broke into our positions southwest of the town, was thrown back in a counter-attack after fierce fighting. During mopping up operations in the rear area in Italy, terrorists lost 8,300 dead and 7,500 prisoners between May 12 and July 24."

U. S. TRICK FOOLS JAPS IN BOMBING OF 3 AIR FIELDS

Yanks Follow as Foe Moves Planes.

ADVANCED ALLIED AIR BASE IN THE SOUTHWEST PACIFIC, July 30 (AP).—Coördinated strategy completely fooled the Japanese in Thursday's first large-scale aerial smash at Halmahera, key to defense of the Philippines and the Netherlands East Indies.

The purpose of the attack was to destroy the enemy air force and air fields at this virgin target. The raiders carried thousands of clusters of fragmentation bombs. Forty-five planes were destroyed on the ground and in the air.

The Mitchell medium bombers went in first, striking Galela, northernmost of the three main air fields grouped around Halmahera's centrally located Waisile bay.

Caught on the Ground.

Four and a half hours later, Liberators appeared over the two other airdromes, Miti and Lolobata.

The strategy worked. Japanese planes, flushed by the bombing and strafing at Galela, streaked for haven to the two other air fields. They were on the ground there when the Liberators arrived.

"We took them by surprise everywhere," said Capt. Eugen W. Shaw of St. Joseph, Mo., pilot of a Liberator. "They barely got their fighters off the ground, and that was a sure sign they were not expecting us."

Fifteen interceptors, more than half the total sent into the air, were shot down. Four of six interceptors were destroyed over the Lolobata air field, with victories credited to Capt. Cyril F. Homer, Sacramento, Calif., who now has a total of 14 planes; 1st Lt. Allen E. Sil, Sterling, Ill., whose total is 7; 1st Lt. Howard J. Sheehan Jr., Beverly Hills, Cal.; 1st Lt. Vernon C. Jenner, Ogdensburg, N. Y.

Four Interceptors Downed.

Three planes of between 10 and 15 interceptors were shot down over the Miti field by 1st Lt. William W. Turner, Rossie, N. Y.; 1st Lt. John S. Duinway, Hilts, Cal., and 1st Lt. William K. Giroux, Momence, Ill.

Bomber fliers praised their fighter escort.

"That P-38 cover, swinging back and forth above and below us all the way, was beautiful," said S. Sgt. Charles C. Randolph, East Liverpool, O., an assistant radioman.

ESTIMATE NAZI AIR FORCE IN FRANCE CUT TO ONLY 950 PLANES

SUPREME HDQS., ALLIED EXPEDITIONARY FORCE, July 30 (AP). — The German air force opposing allied air power in France has shrunk from 4,000 planes to less than 1,000, it was estimated today. This force has back-tracked under the command of Field Marshal Hugo Sperrle, a 100 per cent Nazi.

Of approximately 950 craft left to his command, probably no more than half or three-quarters of the total could ever be put in the sky at once. The allies have information that the enemy is shifting these craft, as well as those of other commands, in a frenzied effort to meet the allied attacks.

Sperrle's command has been unable to renew strength because of the destruction of the German aircraft industry by allied bombers. It is composed of two fighter corps, one heavy bomber corps and one anti-shipping corps.

DISCLOSE AXIS MASS SLAYING OF 103 CIVILIANS

ROME, July 30 (AP).—Capture of the files of the Fascist police chief at Arezzo, southeast of Florence, disclosed a mass reprisal execution of Italians occurred in the nearby town of Stia last April 11, allied headquarters announced today.

Headquarters said the documents proved 1,500 troops of the Hermann Goering division, aided by Fascist civilians, made the townsfolk pay a heavy price for the killing of two Germans by Italian Partisans.

The announcement said 103 bodies, including those of many women and children, were found.

PLOWBOY HANDS GUIDE A B-29 IN MANCHURIA RAID

BY CLYDE A. FARNSWORTH.

ABOARD THE SUPER FORTRESS MONSOON OVER JAPANESE OCCUPIED CHINA, July 29 [Delayed]—(AP).—We 12 aboard the Monsoon have just witnessed a masterpiece of destruction and 11 of us had a hand in it.

We saw a great part of Japan's facilities for manufacturing iron and steel crumble in a holocaust of smoke in the first daylight precision test of the B-29 Super Fortress.

Super Fortresses by the dozen passed the test with distinction at Anshan on the Mukden railway, 53 miles south-southwest of Mukden. It was a new kind of Mukden incident the Japanese will long remember.

For 45 endless seconds this particular B-29 was held on the bombing run by a pair of sure hands that once guided the plow along an Iowa furrow. Below it looked like hell had sprung its hinges.

Altitude Defeats Fighters.

What the Monsoon did was done over and over again by other Super Fortresses which followed us. There was nothing the Japs could do to prevent it. We saw fighters try to reach our high altitude and only turn away under our fire. Anti-aircraft fire was mostly low and ineffectual.

For five minutes before the Monsoon started her solo run B-29s had been bombing the sprawling factory district. Two ruddy orange fires already burned there, one marking a bull's-eye hit.

Anshan was under bombing for about an hour. The last pilots over the target reported flames reaching 6,000 feet and smoke to 26,000 and visible as far as 160 miles.

Ack-Ack Blossoms.

The smoke, black, gray, and sickly yellow, already was pluming over Anshan's factory buildings and railway trackage when the Monsoon took her turn. Ack-ack bloomed around us during the three-quarters of a minute pass. Flak was trailing the Monsoon when the run was ended, but the ground gunners never got our range.

The pilot, Maj. William C. Kingsbury, 38, of Redlands, Cal., threw the switches to take the control of the plane away from the bombardier the instant he waved his signal of "bombs away."

Speed Away for Home.

The Monsoon banked, peeled off in a surge of downhill power and went hightailing away from the ack-ack, back toward the Gulf of Po.

Left Gunner Corp. Clarence R. Hazelton, 38, who used to stalk deer in his [St. Mary's] Pennsylvania hills home, spotted a Jap fighter climbing toward us and fired a 50 caliber burst. But Oscar was too far away and we soon lost him.

Right gunner Corp. George D. Smith, 21, Baton Rouge, La., who once hunted ducks in the bayous around his birthplace of Vacherie, had been looking down out of his heavy glass blister. Smitty called out the direct hits for the Monsoon's bombs.

That was at 11:11 a. m. We had flown the first half of an approximately 3,000 mile round trip for that moment. It was an all-daylight mission, outdone in this war as the longest daylight bombing mission only by the B-29s which had made a raid on Bangkok in Thailand June 6. Half the distance to Anshan was over enemy land and water.

A Difficult Takeoff.

The Monsoon had taken off into a red rising sun from a main super fortress base in western China, as the lead plane of a group operating from that field. The men had been told that this raid had been a top-drawer project for the last year when the B-29 was still a high secret.

The thundering race started down the long runway, and it seemed the plane would never lift. Lt. Barton shook his head gravely. Finally the heavily laden Monsoon parted with the earth.

The hatch was pulled open and we looked out. The Monsoon was barely clearing the treetops.

[A delayed dispatch from the super Fortress base said the Monsoon evidently had raked a tree-top on the takeoff, since one part of the plane projecting from the belly was found caved in when it returned to the base. This mishap failed to interfere with the near-perfect functioning of the Monsoon.]

We were skimming the Chinese hills at minimum altitude when the major discovered he had lost three of his most important flight instruments—the altimeter, the rate climb gauge, and the air speed indicator. For the rest of the flight he and Co-Pilot Brown worked from counterparts of these instruments on the panel.

Smoke in Instrument Board.

After two hours or so in the air, smoke started pouring out from the instrument board. The flight engineer snatched the extinguisher and turned it on the burning wires.

We were flying in close formation with three other B-29s as we headed over the Gulf of Po, but lost them in the soupy sky. According to the briefing, Kingsbury then would have been justified in turning to a secondary target. Only planes in the safety of a formation were supposed to go to Anshan.

"How do you feel about going in alone?" the major asked.

I calculated the sort of answer the major wanted and told him I was in favor of it.

We were on the way home from Anshan when Smitty announced on the interphone that half the big bombload still was in the bay. Some mechanical failure had prevented our dropping all bombs over Anshan.

They Find a Target.

We could never land safely with them so Navigator Perry and Pilot Kingsbury went into a huddle over where to drop them. Over the gulf no shipping target was sighted.

The major decided we would go looking for Jap air fields to bomb. We found one near Chenghsien. Barton salvoed the load at an intersection of two runways, knocking down a control tower.

That was at 1:56 p. m. there was a burst or two of ineffectual flak and three fighters appeared far below to the rear. The tail gunner whammed away at them. They gave up and we returned to our homeward course.

Maj. Kingsbury, head of the Monsoon's team, has been flying ever since he paid $250 for 10 hours' instruction by Jack Frye in 1926. Frye, who later was to head the Transcontinental and Western Air lines, then had five World War I. Curtiss Jennies. Kingsbury joined the army as a flying cadet in 1927 and in 1929 he flew one of the refuelling ships for the "Question Mark" in the endurance run over Lower California. He left the army in 1932, but returned to active duty in 1942.

CHINESE ENTER TENGCHUNG BASE IN BURMA PUSH

Fall Will Help Open the Supply Road.

CHUNGKING, China, July 30 (AP).—Chinese troops have pierced the city limits of Tengchung, principal Japanese Yunnan province base and most heavily fortified bastion in the Salween area, and 2,000 Japanese are facing extermination, an official American review of operations said tonight.

Fall of the inner city of Tengchung is only a matter of time, said the review. Its capture would be hailed as the greatest victory of the Salween offensive, for which the Chinese had been trained and equipped by an American "Y" force.

Tengchung is less than 60 miles southeast of the fighting in North Burma around the besieged city of Myitkyina, and the Salween troops share with Lt. Gen. Joseph W. Stilwell's forces the common goal of reopening an overland route to China.

Four Attacks Fail.

When the city falls, the way will be cleared for the final drive toward north Burma, to join with Stilwell's troops and make possible the completion of the Ledo road.

Tonight's Chinese bulletin said the Japanese made four separate and desperate attempts to break the ring around the key city, but all were repulsed and the encirclement grew tighter. The enemy was cleared from the suburbs, and all the area outside the wall "is now in possession of our forces," the bulletin said.

Meanwhile, Chinese were preparing the way for an all-out attack on the Japanese fortress at Mangshih, below Lungling. One unit has occupied an important hill east of the city after a 20-hour attack, and "our troops are in control of all the high ground between Hsiangta and Mangshih," with "excellent positions and observation for attacks," the bulletin said.

Chinese Hold Hengyang.

Japanese planes yesterday dropped supplies to the isolated garrison of Mangshih, astride the Burma road.

The battle for Hengyang is continuing without abatement, and Chinese troops both within the city and on the outer perimeter are locked in grim fighting, the Chinese high command said.

The Japanese reached the limits of Ningsiang, 32 miles north of Changsha, halting, at least for the time being, a threat to Japanese communications along the Siang river.

Gain a Mile in India.

SOUTHEAST ASIA HDQ., Kandy, Ceylon, July 30 (AP).—A headquarters bulletin tonight said British imperials stabbed another mile toward the East Indian-Burma border city of Tamu.

The fighting now is placed officially at eight miles above Tamu.

GERMAN PLANE, RAIL, OIL BASES TORN BY BOMBS

LONDON, July 30 (AP).—Five hundred Mediterranean based heavy bombers today smashed the Messerschmitt aircraft works at Budapest and rail yards and oil fields in Yugoslavia. A Liberator formation smashed at derricks, pumping stations, and other installations at the Lipse-Budafapuszta oil field, 30 miles west of Lake Balaton, and heavy smoke rose from the target area.

Fortresses and Liberators struck heavily at the Duna works at Budapest, part of a factory system manufacturing Messerschmitts. The adjacent Tokol airdrome also was hit.

Mediterranean allied air force headquarters announced its war planes in the last seven days have destroyed 221 enemy planes in the air, averaging more than 30 daily, in record operations, extending all over southern Europe.

During the night R. A. F. Mosquito bombers from Britain penetrated to a traffic relay point in Frankfurt in the second blow at the German city in two nights. Two-ton blockbusters were cascaded on the city by the Mosquitos, which sallied forth again today, this time over German military barracks near Chateauneuf in the Brest peninsula. The structure was shattered without the loss of a plane.

Mitchells of the R. A. F. and 2d tactical air force struck at a fuel dump a few miles north of Argentan in France later in the day without loss.

Italian and Yugoslav Partisan Forces Unite

ROME, July 30 (AP).—An Italian resistance front bulletin today said the north Italy and Yugoslav committees of national liberation have agreed to form units which will operate together without distinctions of nationality in Venezia and Giulia in northern Italy and Slovenia in Yugoslavia. The war report also said Italian and French Partisans had agreed to coördinate their efforts in Haute Savoie in southeastern France.

BRITISH Y. M. C. A. HOSPITAL STRUCK BY ROBOT BOMB

LONDON, July 30 (AP).—British anti-aircraft units and fighter pilots scored new successes today over robot bombs hurled at southern England and the London area by the Germans, but some of the bombs broke thru and caused damage and casualties.

Much of London's population had left the city over the week-end. In spite of the improved defenses, however, reported incidents included robot hits on a children's playground, a Y. M. C. A. building, a hospital, and several houses. From these hits, four were seriously injured, all at the Y. M. C. A.

R. A. F. heavy bombers returned to the Pas de Calais coast last night and struck at a supply depot near Watten where the Germans' massive concrete structure was believed connected with their new threat to fling ten ton rockets at Britain. More planes crossed the straits tonight in the same direction.

Britain Refuses Support to Free German Group

LONDON, July 30.—An organization of free Germans in London has grown up in the last eight months and seeks to play a part in overthrowing Hitler. The British government so far has refused to support it.

ILLINOIS BELL TELEPHONE COMPANY

CHICAGO, ILLINOIS
OFFICIAL BOOO
July 26, 1944
A. H. MELLINGER PRESIDENT
TO ALL REGULAR EMPLOYEES ON MILITARY LEAVE:
During recent months a great many letters have passed between you who are away in our country's service and the rest of us back here at home. In addition to the letters you have sent me personally, I have had the pleasure of reading numerous others. They are thoughtfully written, and two things are mentioned often. First, you like to hear from us, and second, you want to know more about the plans we are making for your return.
Most of you seem to realize, from our previous correspondence, that the telephone job will be awaiting you. But I am writing now to say again that you can depend on it, and that we look forward to welcoming you back. You can also depend on it that employees returning to their former jobs in the same or similar locations will be placed on the payroll at the same basic wage or salary rates they were receiving when they left, plus all general wage adjustments which were made during their absence.
Our objective will be to have you feel completely at home again in the Telephone family, as soon as possible after your military service is over. Since early this year a committee has been making detailed plans for the return of our people on military leave. It has been arranged to enter on personnel records the military experience of our employees in service. This will be analyzed in each case, and given due weight when opportunity for advancement occurs, in order to make sure new skills are discovered and recognized.
Many, perhaps, whose military assignments have not been on telephone or related communications work, may require some re-training to catch up on changes that have occurred. Such re-training will be available. A few (and very few, we hope) may have some type of impairment which would make performance of their previous work difficult for a period after return. These cases, however, will not be much different from those which happen from time to time under normal conditions. In such instances, modified assignments will be sought, good medical advice will be provided, and personal attention will be given the individual.
No one, of course, can predict with certainty what the post war demands on telephone service will be. But it now looks as though we'll have plenty to do. You may be interested in knowing that there are already about 60,000 unfilled orders for service and the waiting list is still growing. Those who have been unable to get service promptly have been patient and cooperative. They seem to understand, as we do, that all telephone materials available should be used for the fighting forces. We can hope it won't be long until telephone apparatus is again manufactured for the home front, and our employees on leave are back home to help install and operate it. Until then — Good luck!
Sincerely,
A. H. Mellinger

QUICK STRATEGY SWITCH BY NAZI HEADS EXPECTED

Blow at Reds in South Seen as Possible.

BY COL. CONRAD H. LANZA.

[Regular contributor to the Field Artillery Journal and recognized as an authority on military matters.]

Despite all the propaganda bluster in Germany following the purported bomb attack on Hitler, the purge probably has not been, and will not be, a very bloody one. That is true if Hitler is following the advice of Mussolini, which appears probable.

Mussolini in the twenty odd years of his rule in Italy probably caused the deaths of less than a dozen political antagonists. He locked up quite a number on undesirable islands, exiled others, but killed few. So far as reported to date, the only important German killed in the present purge has been Col. Gen. Beck. His history is such that he might well have been an important member of an anti-Hitler "clique."

What is Guderian's Plan?

What will Gen. Heinz Guderian do in the new Hitler military setup? It would make no sense to change leaders, unless a change of policy is intended.

The recent German strategical plan was adopted about the beginning of February, 1943. It was the result of a very full discussion, following the disaster of Stalingrad, the comeback of the Russians, and the arrival of an allied army in North Africa. That the allies would invade Europe not later than 1944 then was perfectly evident.

To meet this situation, the adopted plan was to give way in Russia, fighting backwards. It was intended to so reduce German commitments that troops could be made available to send to western Europe. It was also hoped that the Russians would exhaust themselves by being constantly forced to attack defended positions.

Russia Keeps Coming.

The first part of this plan—to obtain troops for western Europe—has been carried out. According to the British estimate of July 15, the Germans were employing 20 to 25 divisons in Normandy, out of 65 in France and the Low Countries.

The second part of the German plan—exhausting the Russians—has not succeeded.

The Germans had intended to use their reserve in France after the allies had landed the majority of some 80 to 90 divisions believed to be in Britain. So far German reports indicate only some 40 divisions have been landed. Under this plan, if Gen. Eisenhower keeps on retaining troops in England, the German reserve might never be used. Guderian may change this policy.

Might Blast at Montgomery.

The German reserve could be used to attack Gen. Montgomery's army group, with a view to destroying it before help could arrive. If this is tried, the allies could land their divisions now in England in rear of the German attacking forces. If Gen. Montgomery just held on, the Germans might be placed in a difficult position.

The German reserve could be taken away from France and used somewhere else. This would be taking a chance. For then, if the allied divisions in Britain were brought to France, they might quickly occupy all of that great country.

Peril South of Pinsk.

An advance in this direction if it turned north after penetrating the Russian front, would come up in rear of all the Russian armies south of the Pinsk marshes. This plan was urged in 1941, but was set aside in favor of the plan for a three-pronged attack. It is a good plan, and has been carefully studied.

If Turkey can be kept out of the war, and the Bulgar army released for German use, it might be possible for Guderian to stage some such plan. Russia knows all about this and presumably has taken steps not to be surprised.

A similar plan could be undertaken in the north, if troops can be found for it. German advance southeast from Latvia would cut in rear of large Russian forces.

Time Needed for Switch.

It will of course take time for Guderian to rearrange his troops for whatever he proposes to do. He may adopt some entirely different plan, for example attack first in Italy. If this should succeed, the German troops in that country might be withdrawn, and Italy turned back to Mussolini and his Fascists.

That Guderian will do something seems certain. Unless of course the pressure of events is so heavy as to paralyze Germany. But if this does not occur within the next month or so, definite German action, following their change of policy is to be expected.

RUSSIAN TROOPS PUSH WAY INTO EAST PRUSSIA

the 1st White Russian army troops liquidated a large force of Germans trapped there three days ago, Moscow said, killing 15,000 and capturing 2,000.

Units of Rokossovsky's northern wing seized 200 localities west of the Bug river in the triangle formed by Brest Litovsk on the east, Siemiatycze on the northwest, and Siedlce on the west.

In the sector between Brest Litovsk and Bialystok, Gen. Zakharov's 2d White Russian army captured 61 villages.

Russian troops in the area of Brest Litovsk and Bialystok were said in a dispatch from Moscow to have begun a gigantic "right hook" movement that might swing past Warsaw on the north.

GERMAN WAR REPORT.

The Germans' broadcast war bulletin said:

"Enemy attacks were repulsed or checked in counter-thrusts in the Carpathian foreland, as well as south and north of Rzeszow.

"In the great bend of the Vistula our troops in a counter-attack threw back the enemy who had crossed the river. Between Warsaw and Siedlce army troops and Waffen SS are still engaged in heavy fighting with the advancing soviet forces.

"The temporarily isolated garrison of Brest Litovsk made a successful sortie to our lines, together with all the wounded.

"Between the central Bug and the Olita our troops checked fierce Bolshevik attacks at Bialystok and northeast of Augustow.

"In the area of Kaunas the enemy launched an expected large scale attack. In embittered fighting several dents were isolated by counter-thrusts made by our panzer formations.

"Abortive soviet attacks were made in Latvia against the city of Mitau [Jelgava] and northeast of Panevezys. Between the Dvina and Lake Peipus our grenadiers held their positions against strong attacks.

"On the Narva isthmus the enemy, with strong forces, rushed against our positions. Army formations and Germanic volunteers of the Waffen SS scored the full success of defense."

CHICAGO MARINE RAISES FLAG ON GUAM BARRACKS

Three Generals Witness Historic Ceremony.

Back to Normalcy!

PACIFIC FLEET HDQ., Pearl Harbor, July 30 (AP).—American warplanes put Guam's Orote peninsula air field into operation today and American warships anchored in Apra harbor, one-time United States Pacific stronghold. With the Stars and Stripes flying from many places on the island, Guam took on a semblance of its former American occupancy. "Our ships are now using Apra harbor on the west coast of Guam, site of the former American naval base," Adm. Nimitz announced. Several of our aircraft have landed and taken off from the Orote peninsula air field."

Nimitz reported 4,543 Japanese dead and 44 prisoners on Guam as against 958 Americans killed, 4,739 wounded, and 290 missing.

BY AL DOPKING.

[Associated Press War Correspondent Representing the Combined American Press.]

GUAM, Marianas Islands, July 30 (AP).—The American flag was raised yesterday over the marine barracks on Guam for the first time in two and a half years.

Sgt. Harold L. Kendig.

The bodies of Japanese strewn among the battered pillboxes and revetments along Orote peninsula air field and in the smoldering ruins of Sumay told the story of the bloody battle waged by the marines to recapture their own soil.

Capture of the 3½ mile long peninsula gave the Americans control of all three sides of Apra harbor. Gunboats patroled its waters today to pick off any live Japanese remaining.

Gunboats in Harbor.

Six gunboats steamed into the harbor yesterday. As they approached the ruins of Fort Santa Cruz they were greeted by a blast of machine gun fire from a band of Japanese who had dug themselves into the old Spanish fortress. Withering return fire from the gunboats promptly ended the engagement.

The American flag was raised over the wrecked barracks as the first provisional marine brigade wiped out the last pockets of resistance at the narrow tip of the peninsula. The ceremony was attended by three marine generals—Lt. Gen. Holland M. Smith, Maj. Gen. Roy S. Geiger, and Brig. Gen. Lemuel C. Shepherd Jr.

"I take great pleasure in standing here today on this hallowed ground where our marines were killed or captured by the enemy," said Gen. Shepherd.

"You kept the heat on them," said Gen. Smith, "and they can't take it."

And Geiger added, "You licked the Japs on every occasion where you could find them."

Then Sgt. H. J. Parker of Boise City, Okla., handed the colors to Sgt. Harold L. Kendig, 1839 N. Marshfield av., Chicago, and the color guard stood at attention as Old Glory was raised. Marines in field uniforms stood in a circle with steel helmets under their arms as the flag unfurled.

Fighting for a Bath.

The noise of battle rumbled in the distance. Below and to the right of the barracks which housed the 155 marines who vainly tried to defend Guam against 8,000 Japanese in December, 1941, demolition teams were eliminating enemy dugouts.

An hour later came the word for which the brigade had been waiting. Lt. Col. Alan Shapley, Detroit, Mich., said the peninsula was secured.

"You know," cracked Sgt. Charles Harbison, Francisco, Ind., "what we've really been fighting for is to get out to the end of this peninsula where we can find water for a bath."

Patch Up Air Field.

Other marine and army patrols fanned far out beyond the 10 mile front running down the western shore of Guam from Adelup point in the north to Anae Island. Patrols reported little enemy activity, indicating the Japanese may have fallen back to defensive positions, where they are awaiting attack.

On Orote air strip bulldozers are at work patching up bomb craters. Japanese tanks, gutted by fire, lay alongside the road. Behind the American lines are huge piles of equipment and munitions the Japanese abandoned in their retreat.

Marines Lose Heavily.

OROTE PENINSULA, Guam, July 28 [Delayed]—(AP).—Marines on Orote peninsula are bitterly tired tonight after a week of steady fighting. Some marine units have been depleted by half, and many have only a fraction of their early fighting strength.

Marine advances toward Orote airport caught the flank of Japanese positions designed to repel assault from the sea. These elaborate trenches, pillboxes, and mine fields lost most of their effectiveness when taken from the land side.

Their presence also indicated the Japanese did not know where to expect a landing on Guam. If they did, they wasted a lot of time preparing positions where the Americans didn't land.

Instead of occasional caves, such as were found on Saipan and central Pacific atolls, here one cave is dug beside another.

The marines haven't had a night's sleep since they landed a week ago, and every one of them has been drenched daily by rains.

"O, I won't be lonesome, mother. We will share an apartment with five other officers and their wives! Won't that be super?"

Japs Expect U. S. Attack on the Philippines Soon

LONDON, July 30 (AP).—The German news agency DNB, quoting a Tokyo spokesman, said in a broadcast today that the Japanese expect an attack soon against the Philippine Islands.

U.S. USES DEADLY SECRET WEAPON TO TAKE TINIAN

BY CLINTON GREEN.

[Representing the combined American press.]

ABOARD EXPEDITIONARY FLAGSHIP OFF TINIAN, Marianas Islands, July 30 (AP).—One of the most fearful instruments of death from America's arsenal of secret weapons is aiding in the conquest of Tinian Island, which saw American marines storm into Tinian town tonight.

The secret weapon is truly murderous and it is doubtful whether any human being within 100 feet of its action would live. Devastation and death would follow its use on the crowded cities of the Japanese homeland

For security reasons it is impossible to even hint at its construction or its manner of use.

End of Battle Near.

The end of the fight for Tinian is in sight. The marines have compressed the remaining Japanese into an area of approximately two square miles.

Marines of the second and fourth divisions swept ahead all day long registering a gain of at least a mile and a half and at some points as much as two miles.

Late in the afternoon tanks broke out from the advancing marine lines to probe well beyond Tinian town, which has been reduced to a mass of rubble.

Narrow Yank Line.

The marines already have pushed across the island's widest point and are enjoying the military advantage of a shortened front line. When the marines reach the southern extremities of Tinian they are going to find scores of enemy dead — killed by unrelenting bombardment.

Many Japanese probably have gone into caves, but the hills and slopes that contain such hiding places have been included in the targets of the big guns.

Transports Use Field.

A high state of morale was reflected in today's advances, which came after a torrential rainstorm.

The speed with which Ushi point air field was put into condition was illustrated in the taxi-like service inaugurated between it and the fields on Saipan. All day big transports evacuated wounded after unloading supplies.

There has been no report of any Japanese attempts to sneak off Tinian to Aguijan Island, five miles to the southwest, which is probably doomed to die on the limb.

CHILD KILLED BY CAR.

Sioux City, Ia., July 30 [Special].—Sheriff Edward Ekren of Union county, South Dakota, is seeking the driver of a car which killed Vicki Towns, 3, yesterday afternoon at Beresford, S. D., 60 miles northwest of here. The girl was struck while playing along a road near the home of her grandparents.

KILLS HIMSELF AS WIFE LAUGHS AT HIS THREAT

Gilbert V. Foust, 39, of 2645 Gunnison st., a postal clerk, shot and killed himself in his home early yesterday after a quarrel with his wife, Ara. She told police that her husband held a .22 caliber pistol to his forehead and threatened to pull the trigger. She said she believed he was bluffing, laughed, and walked away. She heard a shot, turned around, and saw Foust dead on the floor. Their two children, a boy 14 and a girl 12, are in a summer camp. Foust was employed at the postal substation in the Merchandise Mart.

For a 12 mo $100 LOAN — At Usual Small Loan Rate, You Pay $20.84 — At Merchandise Bank You Pay Only 8.00 — YOU SAVE $12.84

For a 12 mo $200 LOAN — At Usual Small Loan Rate, You Pay $39.52 — At Merchandise Bank You Pay Only 16.00 — YOU SAVE $23.52

*Savings shown apply to "signature only" loans repaid in 12 monthly instalments, cost to be deducted in advance. You can save more if you borrow with one co-maker. In either case, you save at least half of usual and lawful Small Loan Charges.

IF—for borrowing $100 you've had to repay 12 payments of $10.07 each—that amounts to $120.84—which is $20.84 more than you borrowed. And $20.84, therefore, is what that loan cost you.

That same amount, $100, at Merchandise Bank would cost you only $8.00—on your signature only. It would cost you only $5.50—with one co-maker. So—here you would save at least $12.84—or as much as $15.34—depending on which plan you borrow.

Money In Your Pocket

What you save, in either case, is money in your pocket. It amounts to nearly as much as two payments on your loan. That's the difference between usual small loan charges and Merchandise Bank's extremely low rates.

If you need a loan, or want to reduce present borrowing costs, get in touch with Merchandise Bank. There's no need to take time off your job. Simply phone Whitehall 4500, or write, and everything can be quickly and confidentially arranged.

I'LL ADMIT there's a funny lump in my throat . . .

Glad I said "good-by" to civilian life months ago—and went into the WAC. Glad I went through all the training and on to active duty.

For, as a Wac, I'm really working for victory. Sharing the hard part of war. And the glory that will come.

I'd rather be with them—in the Army . . .

Than waiting back home—thinking up things to make the time go by—listening to the news—wondering when it'll all be over.

Yes, I'm in the Army and on my way—and I'm glad to the bottom of my heart!

NAVY'S TOP ACE RUNS IN CLOSE TO DOWN JAPS

Score 19 in Air; 18 More on the Ground.

The way to shoot down a Jap plane is to get in close before pressing the trigger. It saves ammunition which you might need badly in the next few moments. So says Lt. Alexander Vraciu, 25, the navy's top ranking fighter ace, who is home on his first furlough to tell about shooting 19 Japs out of the sky at $100 a Jap.

Vraciu has asked to return to Pacific fleet duty to carry on the sky marksmanship tradition set by his mentor, the late Lt. Comdr. Edward H. [Butch] O'Hare.

"Butch taught me all that I know," said Vraciu. "For five months I 'was his right wing man."

Vraciu has bettered O'Hare's mark of five planes shot down in one engagement. He did it June 19, when he downed six Jap dive bombers in the aerial victory that followed the Saipan conquest.

Price Set by Uncle.

The $100 a Jap price was set by Vraciu's uncle, John Tincu, a Chicago subcontractor who forges die orders for Grumman Hellcats, the ships flown in the Pacific by the brown eyed pilot from East Chicago, Ind.

Vraciu arrived on an air liner yesterday. At the airport were his parents, Policeman and Mrs. Alexander Vraciu Sr., of 3553 Pennsylvania av., East Chicago, and his sister, Mrs. Betty Gall of Munster, Ind. Mayor Frank Migas of East Chicago helped with the welcoming. There was a reunion in Tincu's home at 3355 N. New England av., in Edison Park.

Tincu said the $1,900 for the 19 planes will be used as a nest egg to start the pilot, a De Pauw [Ind.] university graduate, in business after the war.

Gets 18 Grounded Planes.

Vraciu, who believes his mark of 19 planes is still the navy record but who says other pilots have no doubt equaled his six-in-a-day mark, has 18 grounded planes in his log book. "They only get counted in the European theater," he laughed.

In the air or on the ground, Vraciu uses the same technique—get in close.

"I don't advise every one to do it," he said modestly, "but if you get in close, well within the range of your machine guns, you can aim at the wing roots or at the gas tank. Close range shooting saves ammunition."

With his mother beside him, Alex recounted his fighting career. His first action was in the Marcus Islands, Aug. 31, 1943.

"All the Jap planes were on the ground, but Butch and three others of us sank a ship. It was a tanker. Our guns set it afire, and the torpedo plane pilots were pretty mad at us."

O'Hare Lost Next Month.

Over Wake Island Oct. 5, Butch, Vraciu, and another pilot jumped three Zeroes and got one each. "My first plane happened to be easy," he said. There he got his first two grounded planes. After a Rabaul raid he parted company with O'Hare, who was lost in action the next month.

Alex's second plane came Nov. 20 at Tarawa. At Kwajalein late last December, he got three more.

"We were coming in on a fighter sweep," he explained. "Just before the run over the target I looked over my shoulder—a good thing to learn early. There were eight Zeros coming in.

Made a Lot of Mistakes.

"Things were a little hot for a while. Every now and then we would see a plane flashing by. They made a lot of mistakes and we took advantage of them. We worked down six of the Japs and the other two ran. I got credit for one plane."

Later the same day he got three other planes and one probable.

"The first Palau raid in late March was a strafer's holiday," Vraciu continued. "I got 12 on the ground in two days. At Hollandia, conditions were the same, with almost nothing in the air.

"I don't recommend it, but for strafing planes I start about 900 feet and pull out of the dive at from 50 to 100 feet. You avoid a lot of flak that way."

Rescued After Crash.

On the second Truk raid, when Vraciu added two more planes to his list, his roommate was "a little too anxious" in chasing a Zero and crashed. Vraciu's plane was hit by anti-aircraft fire and forced down, but he was rescued.

In the early Saipan fighting, Vraciu got a Zero, but was most proud of the 7,000 ton cargo ship he sank with a 500 pound bomb.

"The Saipan freighter was hit right at the water line with my first shot," he said. "Coming back, my engine was throwing oil and I got shot up a little."

It was in the Saipan fighting that Vraciu got his six plane record.

"We had better fighter direction," he explained. "The Japs sent a large mass of dive bombers and fighters, mixed together, and we just worked them off. They have some good ships and a lot of good pilots, but from now on we know that we have superiority in numbers and men.

Herd Japs Toward Fleet.

"In the Philippine sea engagement, we herded the Japs along in formation toward our fleet. That way we could shoot down more planes. We shot them down one at a time, working on the rear of their formations."

Late the next day the navy flyers made a long run to try to slow up the Jap fleet.

"In the midst of a dog fight, some of the boys were out of position and my wingman got shot down," Vraciu said. "I got the Zero that got him, but it was too late then and it didn't help matters at all."

That was his 19th plane. He blinked wet eyes as he told about it.

CHICAGOANS RIP JAPS IN TOUGH SAIPAN BATTLE

Chicagoans took a leading part in the fighting that routed the Japs from Saipan, a story relayed by the army's central Pacific area public relations division disclosed yesterday.

Pfc. George W. Wood, 24, of 4639 Broadway, was a cannon loader on the self-propelled cannon mount, "Tokio Rose," which destroyed a Jap tank, two supply depots, three pillboxes, and 21 machine gun nests along the slopes of Mount Tapotchau and in the northern part of the island.

"It was a field day for us," said Sgt. Max E. Howe, 24, Astoria, Ill., tank commander. Also aboard the mount was Pvt. Harvey W. Johnston, 23, of Kinmundy, Ill., gunner.

"Rambling Wreck" a Wrecker.

Corp. Harold E. Hilton, 22, of 2167 Meade av., was driver of another cannon mount, the "Rambling Wreck," which, in 18 days of continuous action, accounted for 12 enemy pillboxes and several other Jap gun positions.

"We were lucky," said Corp. Hilton. "We didn't lose a single man, but we had a pretty narrow shave when three Jap anti-tank shells zoomed thru our tank. One of the shells went right thru our engine compartment. Another hit one of our tank wheels, and the third zipped in between the men in the open turret."

Mop Up Cave Strongholds.

Sgt. Elmer T. Niemer, 23, of 2535 Mango av., commanded another cannon mount, "The Rolling Fort," which accounted for five Jap pillboxes, 18 machine gun positions and 15 cave strongholds, some of which held enemy field pieces. The "Rolling Fort" was driven by another Illinois man, Pvt. Niro K. Strappazon, 21, of 120 Morris st., Joliet.

"One day we threw everything we had at the Japs when they launched one of their last charges," said Sgt. Niemer. "We used our cannon and machine guns and then we picked up our tommy guns, Garands, and carbines and peppered away with them till we just got plain tired of shooting. We got a lot of Japs that day."

400 Japs Killed in Sector.

The bodies of more than 400 Japs were found in the sector where the "Rolling Fort" helped the infantry repulse the enemy north of Tanapag.

Two Chicagoans had a narrow escape when their tank, the "Double Dip," threw a track after many days of action.

"Just as we started to make repairs, the Japs poured mortar fire on us," said Corp. Vincent A. Leben, 23, 2519 S. Drake av., the gunner.

He and Pvt. Harry W. Koziol, 21, of 2048 Wabansia av., radio operator, and Pvt. Donald R. Peecher, 23, of Rockford, cannon loader, were rescued by another self-propelled mount that rumbled alongside, took them aboard, and carried them out of the field of mortar fire.

"Double Dip" Is Repaired.

"As soon as the mortar fire let up, we got back to 'Double Dip' and took it to the rear for repairs," said Corp. Leben. "It's been as good as new ever since."

"Double Dip" accounted for seven Jap pillboxes and many machine gun positions.

"Cherokee," with Pvt. Frank Laydon, 31, of 8010 Ashland av. as loader, scored one Jap medium tank and a Jap artillery piece in addition to 12 machine gun nests and several other enemy positions. Others in the crew were Pvt. Clarence P. Lewis, 33, of Decatur, Ill., gunner, and Pvt. Freeman L. Hinch, 31, of Petersburg, Ill., loader.

One cannon mount at one time or another had five Illinois men in its crew, including Pvt. Charles W. Bergiel, 33, of 2344 S. Albany av., Chicago, loader; Pvt. Charles R. Bohrman, 31, of Springfield, radio operator; Pvt. Leslie L. Randle, 24, of Belleville, gunner; Corp. Tony A. Cicero, 24, of Rockford, driver, and Pvt. Joseph C. Spaeth, 23, of Elmwood Park, loader. The crew's battle score lists 14 machine gun nests, 10 pillboxes or other strong points, and uncounted Jap soldiers killed.

BUENOS AIRES, Argentina, July 30 (AP).—Argentine workers, demonstrating in support of the government's foreign policy, paraded to the foreign ministry last night, shouting various patriotic slogans including the chant "Argentina, Yes; Yankees, No." The demonstration was similar to one two days ago following an official statement that Argentina would continue her foreign policy, criticized officially by the United States as "pro axis."

ACE GABRESKI'S CREW MOURNFUL OVER LOSING HIM

A UNITED STATES FIGHTER BASE IN ENGLAND, July 30 (AP).—Things were mighty blue around here after Lt. Col. Francis Grabeski, American ace of aces, failed to return from a mission July 20. The Oil City, Pa., Thunderbolt squadron leader who had destroyed 28 German planes in the air and three on the ground was one of the most popular men on the field.

Hardest hit was Staff Sgt. Ralph H. Safford, Fenwick, Mich., Grabeski's ground crew chief.

"We were sweating the colonel back from that mission more than any of the others because he was just about ready to go home and get married," Safford said. "When the operations officer told us his plane wouldn't be back, we were stunned. We hardly could believe it."

It was the job of Corp. Felix Schacki, 3731 Adams st., Gary, Ind., assistant crew chief, to paint on swastikas representing the planes Grabeski had destroyed.

THE WIN THE ELECTION PARTY.

Chairman Dies of the house committee on un-American activities has made public a list of 71 government officials who appear to have been taking orders from and doing work for the Communist-CIO political action committee. All of them are highly paid job holders, with salaries running to $8,000 and $10,000 a year. Two of them, Atty. Gen. Biddle and Secretary of Labor Perkins, are cabinet members. Rep. Dies presented as evidence against them a 39 page list of long distance telephone calls and eight pages of photostats of telegrams. These communications were exchanged between the political action committee's New York headquarters and the federal employes Rep. Dies named.

The Texas congressman has unearthed a double-barreled scandal thru these findings. It is a scandal because the Hatch act which covers all but a very few of these payrollers makes campaigning by federal employes a crime. It is a scandal because the well paid government workers are supposed to be members of Mr. Roosevelt's self-styled "win the war" administration. Most of them are executives in war agencies which are supposed to be working at top speed to direct the nation's prosecution of the war and are supposed to be vital to that task. Instead, these job holders are playing politics, devoting their time to furthering Mr. Roosevelt's fourth term aspirations.

Rep. Dies says that Sidney Hillman's Communist-dominated CIO political action committee is "the political arm of the New Deal administration." Rather, it is the political brains of the fourth term drive. It picked the fourth term ticket in Chicago, and it is now directing the fourth term campaign, while Mr. Roosevelt and his payrollers try to make the people think they are devoting all their energies to winning the war. Rep. Dies' evidence proves how outrageously false that boast is. The New Dealers who tried to ditch the New Deal tag for the more popular "win the war" label are busy, just as they have always been, trying to win the next election. The public pays their salaries in the name of war work. The only work it gets out of them is ward heeling on the grand scale.

Mr. Roosevelt's administration is not the "win the war" administration. It is the win the election administration.

OATFIELD AIRPORTS.

William A. M. Burden, assistant secretary of commerce, has announced that the civil aeronautics administration will ask congress for a billion dollars to build 3,000 new airports, 2,900 of them small ones for private flyers, after the war. Burden says that there are 3,086 airports in the United States today, and that the CAA program will call for improvement of 1,625 of these. Apparently the rest of the work would be new construction. As the project lines up, most states would get one or possibly two airports suitable for commercial use by medium to large sized planes, and the rest of the fields would be of the handkerchief type in small communities.

Before congress adds another billion dollars to the national debt in the name of air mindedness and public employment, the taxpayers have a right to ask what happened the last time the New Dealers started out to dot the nation with airports. It was hardly 10 years ago. The blue eagle of NRA was flying high over all of Mr. Roosevelt's alleged prosperity, and nearly every corner drug store was banking its day's receipts in treasury department checks. The WPA had embarked on a program of nation-wide airport expansion which promised to bring the buzz of propellers to the ears of every sheepherder, rancher, and quarter section operator thruout America.

Airports were established in half the county seats in the country. There was a provision that the community was to foot part of the cost, but that was forgotten. Bewildered mayors made bewildered speeches underneath the flags and bunting that bedecked the town square and gave drive and luster to the Roosevelt projects. It was work and progress at its New Deal best. The town loafers and indigent, along with a few worthy farmers who wanted only the opportunity to farm, were commissioned in hordes to grab up WPA shovels and get on the pay roll. Boys out of engineering college who had looked to $110 a month with Standard Oil or General Motors started running levels over some amazed farmer's acres at $165 and expenses. There was a project director, a deputy project director, his aids, assistants, and assistant assistants, to say nothing of timekeepers and clerks. The paper work brigade ran upward thru township, county, state, and regional directors and their offices, to Harry Hopkins in his Washington maelstrom. Uncle Sam, God bless him, was paying them all, and anybody who failed to get his slice was a fool.

But what happened to the airports? Anybody fortunate enough to possess binoculars and the priority to get into the air these days can see the remains of them—limed circles at a crossroads a mile or so outside of a county seat town. There may be a broken down hangar used now for a cowshed. There are no other buildings, nor are there any planes taking off from these WPA acres. Most of them today are growing cash crops, got back into production somehow by the neighborhood's farmers. Nothing beside remains except the challenge to the fourth term aspirant who claims he brought the United States back to prosperity thru this kind of tax financed largess.

Talk of air parks and airports for every village and town is a pleasant post-war dream, but the low priced, foolproof automobile got here long before the roads for it to run upon. The same thing is going to happen for the airplane. Metropolitan centers which already are benefiting from commercial airplane traffic must enlarge and improve their airports. But why should the federal government foot the cost? When private flying comes of age and ceases to be merely a sport, as motoring was in the duster and goggles era, commercial enterprise and local profit will provide facilities for it. By the time the small planes are here in any number, the local communities will be ready for them.

America's taxpayers have had one expensive lesson in socialistic airport expansion and they do not need another. The New Dealers may envision another WPA in their CAA airport project, but congress ought to be smart enough to have the right answer for that.

WAR NEWS AND THE STOCK MARKET.

Stock prices last week held around the low of the week before, in spite of the sale by John D. Rockefeller of three-fourths of a million shares of his Standard Oil holdings. At the close on Saturday the Dow-Jones industrial average was up a shade from the previous week-end but down 4½ points from the high of the year reached during Republican convention week.

The rise to that peak had been persistent since the middle of May, with the peace stocks, such as the automotive, building, radio, and merchandising groups, taking the lead. When the war news was good enough to foreshadow victory, altho some months in the future, stocks moved briskly forward. However, when the progress on both the Russian and Normandy fronts became so rapid as to indicate that victory was only weeks instead of months ahead, the market began to slide. Speculators ceased to be influenced by the prospects of a great prosperity when the war was over, and were swayed by thoughts of the uncertainties that peace would bring.

It was not much different in the last war, as the great financial historian, A. D. Noyes, observed. Our markets in the spring of 1918 held firm in the face of the early successes of the German offensive and Ludendorf broke the British line so badly that there was talk of a Dunkirk. The market never lost confidence in victory. When our counter-offensive got going in July and progress was being achieved, a bull market got under way. Between July 15 and Oct. 22 the market rose nearly 10 points. But when victory was actually achieved, the market declined, as Noyes put it, "more disposed to discuss the probabilities of the unknown future than to express exultation over what had already happened."

Stock prices are 60 per cent above the low of the war period. That came in the spring of 1942, when our military outlook was the blackest in all American history. A large part of the American fleet had been knocked out at Pearl Harbor; the Japs in the battle of Java sea had defeated and all but destroyed a fleet of American, British, Dutch and Australian ships commanded by a Dutch admiral; the "impregnable" fortress of Singapore had fallen; the enemy was rapidly taking over the Indies and the port of Rangoon in Burma had fallen, cutting off supplies to the Chinese over the Burma road; the American-Filipino army of 35,000 was defeated and forced to surrender; Rommel had stopped a British offensive in Africa and was sweeping eastward thru Egypt; Australia was pleading for help.

With the Japs striking blow after blow without our being able to put up any sort of defense, and with no favorable developments in any other quarter, the market was alarmed. Both our military fortunes and the market touched bottom. That day the averages closed below 93, the lowest on a dollar basis, and on a gold basis down to about the level of early March, 1933, just before the bank moratorium. The safety of our nation was in jeopardy.

But within a few days there was to come stirring news. On May 4 to 8 the United States navy had engaged the Japanese navy in the greatest naval battle of the war. With planes operating from our carriers taking a leading part our navy had destroyed 15 vessels and damaged a score more. Our loss was three vessels including the carrier Lexington. By great good fortune a Tribune correspondent, Stanley Johnston, was on the Lexington and he survived to write one of the greatest war stories of all time.

The victory was of the greatest importance in foreshadowing things to come. Armed forces of the united nations had met the enemy in a major engagement in the course of which they had achieved an overwhelming success. It was there proved that we were not inferior to the enemy in battle power. We had the know-how, the equipment and the men necessary to defeat the enemy. The outcome could no longer be in doubt. It was only a question of producing enough equipment and training a force sufficiently large to accomplish the objective. That point seems now almost reached. The market now is discounting victory and peace—something which seemed remote or unobtainable in those dark days of 1942.

RISKY NEW ENTERPRISES.

[Cincinnati Enquirer.]

New Dealers complain that capital is afraid to take risks and invest in new enterprises. There are two good reasons why new enterprises are not appearing. In the first place, war forbids new buildings, new machinery, and the recruiting of a working force. These basic necessities as things are now are impossible. Then a risk demands a corresponding profit. It is a gamble and should have odds in its favor. But the government gives no odds. If the new and risky enterprise fails, the people who put up the money lose it; if it succeeds, then the government, by taxation, takes away the profit and leaves the owners not even bread and butter money, let alone pie.

An old, established business can stand for this, but a new concern, struggling to get on its feet, cannot. And that is why investors are not taking the risk of starting new enterprises. They justly feel the laborer is worthy of his hire.

KNIGHTS ON CRUSADE.

The first part of the German Reich to suffer invasion in this war will be East Prussia, whose history runs back to the age of chivalry and knights in armor. A German order of knighthood, founded in Jerusalem in the Third Crusade, went crusading against the heathen Slavs in that region early in the 13th century and settled down as rulers. They founded cities, built castles, and diked the Vistula against floods; these improvements are there today.

* * *

The Polish Review, a government-in-exile publication, devotes much of its current issue to these Teutonic Knights and their unwelcome intrusion into Slavic territory, dealing with them as land-grabbers. The Britannica, however, tells us that they went into that benighted neck of the woods at the invitation of a Polish duke and on the urging of a Polish bishop. After two centuries of power the knights and their common soldiers, to the number of 40,000, were wiped out by the Poles and Lithuanians at the battle of Tannenberg, also called Grunwald.

* * *

Among the knights errant who volunteered for service with the Teutonic order was a young English adventurer of royal blood, Henry Lancaster, earl of Derby. He spent nine months in the Baltic wilderness [1390] and returned the next year for another crack at the heathen. Eight years later he became King Henry IV. of England, about whose reign you may read in the dramas of William Shakespeare. Here is the basis for a historical romance that Sir Walter Scott and his imitators overlooked.

* * *

When the crusades against the Saracens had tapered off, it seems to have been a fashion for young blades in western Europe to join up with the Teutonic Knights. In Chaucer's "Canterbury Tales," the first pilgrim to tell a story is "a very perfit gentil" Knight, and of him it is said in the prolog:

Ful ofte tyme he hadde the feast begunne
Above alle the knights that were in Pruce.
In Lettowe had he ridden and in Ruce.

This was written before the adventures of Henry IV. in Pruce [Prussia], Lettowe [Latvia], and Ruce [Russia].

THE SONG WE SHARE.

They say that often as the night grows chill
And the guns' dark mutter is hushed a while
The sound of singing comes softly and still
Haunting and poignant and quietly clear,
Friend and foe join in the simple refrain;
The golden-haired loved one, desired and dear,
And thoughts turn homeward to "Lili Marlene."
The camps of conflict are bitterly drawn
In steel and fire, for the lines divide
The slaves and free, yet in victory's dawn
Peace shall come sooner, and longer abide,
As men remember their battle-shared song

Italy, Thy Name Is Mud.

If the infantryman of today writes the geography books for the children of tomorrow, I imagine the section devoted to Italy will read something like this: "Italy consists of thousands of square miles of mud; its principal exports are clay and mud, and its foremost points of interest are muds of various colors and consistencies . . ."

Should you think of mud as some unpleasant stuff which results when a lot of rain merges with an open spot of ground, you're missing the conception of the Italian variety. This mud has a personal grudge against the human race—a kind of sneering contempt for mankind which leads it to commit all sorts of outrages. It will pull off your shoes, toss sticky globs on your trousers, and make you think you are walking on a floor made of well-oiled roller bearings.

Italian mud is by its nature well equipped to perpetrate indignities. A slight rain will cause it to stick to your feet in five pound blobs; a heavy downpour makes it less sticky, but deeper and slipperier. The recommended strategy for dealing with it is to stay under cover and occupy your time by sailing paper boats down the rain trenches. There have been several cases [unauthenticated] of hardy souls venturing outside, only to sink out of sight in the company street and never be heard from again.

Even in a tent you're not always safe. Last Sunday it rained, and we soon discovered that our tent had been pitched by a cross-eyed half-wit named Moe, so it didn't sit properly over the rain trenches, thus allowing the rain water to gurgle blithely in the back and out the front door. We spent the entire morning building a system of dykes and canals in the living room floor [a job for the engineers, really, but we couldn't get out to call them], and sloshing water about in a frenzied attempt to get rid of the stuff. At long last we ceased our labors and leaned back to observe the results.

It stopped raining. Pvt. Cholly.

HOLLYHOCKS IN RAIN.

It seemed the rain would never stop—
I scolded every splashing drop!
I grumbled, too, my treasured row
Of hollyhocks took long to grow;
It was a day, I must confess,
Of downright ornery grumpiness!
And later when the sunshine came,
My heart was overwhelmed with shame,
For there beside the garden walk
I saw a tall and stately stalk
Whose chalice'd blooms of snowy white
Held jeweled drops of rainbow-light.

FACIAL NEURALGIA AND ITS RELIEF.

NEURALGIA is painful at best but the variety known as "tic douloureux" may give rise to the most unbearable suffering which mankind is called upon to endure.

The nerve in question [trigeminal] leaves the skull and divides into three main branches. The upper leads to the forehead and one eye, with twigs extending backward along the scalp. The middle portion travels to the upper jaw, teeth, and much of the nose. The third tributary feeds the lower jaw, including the area from the lip to the point of the chin and spreads upward above the top of the ear. Any one or all three of these regions may be involved.

There are no words to describe the severity of the seizure altho patients will relate that it is like red hot coals, molten lead poured into the veins, or whirling knives. The first attack may be thought of as a toothache which is so disturbing that the dentist is consulted in the hope that an extraction or two will bring amelioration.

Many sufferers will state that the taking of a swallow of water or experiencing a gust of air will induce the symptoms. The first bout may last but a few seconds or minutes. In fact, it is not uncommon for months or years to elapse before a second paroxysm will identify the malady. In a few instances distress will disappear as suddenly as it strikes.

As a rule the disorder is confined to one side of the face and many a victim will avoid touching the spot which he has learned to regard as a trigger zone. If it is near the lips, he may endeavor to converse using only the opposite corner of the mouth, as the slightest movement may result in a siege.

Altho many methods of cure have been tried, such as injecting the offending branch with alcohol or actually severing the structure, the only permanent relief lies in cutting the sensory root within the skull. If the patient has starved himself because he is afraid to eat, surgery should not be undertaken until at least reasonable comfort has enabled him to bring nutrition to normal. Thereafter only a skilled neurosurgeon should be in charge. This is a formidable operation but, in expert hands, is attended with little risk.

Thereafter improvement is rapid. Food is taken without fear and the patient can be out of bed within two or three days. As a sequel the parts may become numb and considerable adjustment will be required because one side of the face feels "dead." If the filaments supplying the eye have been cut, sensation will be lost. In consequence the individual may not be aware that a particle of dust or a cinder has lodged on the cornea. This means that objects coming into contact with the optic will not sound their usual warning—pain. Careful attention will be necessary in order to avoid infection.

Few persons who have submitted to this procedure ever regret it. It is the only sure method of easing a type of nerve pang which is more than flesh and blood can bear.

Man Bites Dog Hard!

Don't try to dispute this tale, please, for we saw the letter in which an American soldier stationed in the African desert wrote that he misses, above all else, the radio commercials.

Japanese Lullaby.

A long and illuminating evening can be spent listening to Radio Tokyo by short wave. It is childhood revisited, for during that period you will hear more fairy tales than in many a year.

They are charming people, these Japanese, and their reports beamed to the United States on the state of the world they know are refreshing. All are in English, most of the speakers purportedly Americans entranced with the Japanese way of life. The only drawback to this theory is that their otherwise impeccable English occasionally makes sorties into the realm of sing-song or stray slips of the tongue. This was the mistake of the fine ex-American we heard pronounce Iowa I-oh'-wa and the erudite commentator who blandly said there had not been "a single case of epidemic" in the Philippines in six months.

One of the programs is blatant sacrilege. Hearing it fills your throat with silent screams of rage. It comes on nightly under the program title, "The Man on the Merry Go Round," and is supposed to be a merry group of Americans taken prisoner at Corregidor. They sing, rollick, and tell jokes as they play before the microphone in their delightfully cozy barracks. The program opens with the singing of "The Sweetheart of Sigma Chi." Then the men talk about what a fine time they are having and start to sing such old American favorites as "I Love You Truly," "I Know That You Know," "School Days" [the latter followed by ecstatic whee's], and "Cheer Up and Smile." Interlarded with it is the voice of a woman reading letters addressed to their families in America by American prisoners. All the letters are alike, and all probably are as phony as the merry making.

But the news reports are the ones we went for. These open with the strains of "Hawaiian Paradise" and close with Bing Crosby singing "Song of the Islands" or "Aloha Oe." They are just as sweet and rosy as can be.

The commentators give long dissertations on them wicked American imperialists who "brought on this colonial war." They refer to us, with a quaint bit of mispronunciation, as "boon-duggiers" and refer to Adm. King's "war making colleagues." All the Japanese people want, they say again and again, is peace, and probably no truer words were ever spoken except the sentence opening a diatribe on what the Japanese have achieved in their last decade of war:

"Asia," quoth the gent making this diatribe, "is not the same since the war started."

O, he tells you, things are delightful now in Burma. "Since we liberated Burma a year ago," this Mr. Shimusara or something of the sort gushed, "a truly wonderful youth movement has sprung up there! Every one is happy."

And the Philippines! The educational facilities there now are superb, simply superb.

And those poor Americans! What a fearful dither they are in now out in the Pacific, knowing as they do "the deadly power of the Japanese aircraft to win the battle."

"Poor Adm. King," one gentleman said pityingly, "cannot be expected to know what kind of a transformation Japan has undergone and is undergoing since the loss of Saipan. There is no comfort for him in the new Jap cabinet. It is like a two edged sword. It spells danger." Here he kindly spelled out the word d-a-n-g-e-r.

In conclusion, in reviewing the day's battle activities, he, in common with his fellow commentators of that night and all preceding nights, said:

"All our brave Japanese planes returned undamaged."

Our host for this informative evening said that once a Jap commentator substituted the adverb "safely" for "undamaged" and concluded, sadly: "But one plane had three bullet holes in the left wing."

WOMEN IN INDUSTRY.

Chicago, July 18.—There is much thought being given, these days, to the post-war world and how folks back home are going to be affected by the millions of returning soldiers and sailors. These men will want jobs, not doles, and many working women, who have come to look upon their work as essential, are afraid that they will be replaced by men when the war is over.

I think it is safe to say that women have entered industry to stay, and that they are not going to be permanently displaced by returning service men. This country is loaded down with a debt that is going to require very large income taxes for a long, long time. In many families, where the children are large enough to help take care of themselves, or are fully grown, the wives will want to keep on working in order to obtain a higher standard of living than would be possible on the salary of one wage earner.

This situation really takes care of itself. If two are working instead of one, the incomes of two are being spent, thus adding to the national spending and earning power. I do not believe that women in industry offer a threat to ex-service men, nor that ex-service men, returning for jobs, offer a permanent threat to the woman who wants to continue to work. CARL M. RHODES.

PRESIDENT OR FUEHRER?

Evanston, Ill., July 19.—Sigrid Schultz, in her recent book, "Germany Will Try It Again," devoted one chapter to the hysterical devotion which German Nazi women have showered on Hitler, and she has pointed out the active part this fanatical devotion has played in keeping Hitler in power.

As I listened to the speech made by Mrs. Phillips, assistant chairman of the Democratic national committee, at the opening session of the Democratic convention, I was struck by this same hysterical, fanatical hero worship evident thruout all of her remarks.

But when, in a final burst of oratory, she referred to Mr. Roosevelt as "our President, our commander in chief, our leader . . . our master." I could only wonder whether we were nominating a President or a fuehrer!

Chicago, July 26.—I expected to see a white rabbit pulled from the chairman's pocket but was not prepared for the strange animal that came out of the Stadium last week.

"What do they call it?" I asked a man with a ten gallon hat, thinking he was an authority on corrals.

"It's neither horse nor jack, mule nor jenny," he replied, for it was an animal with four hind feet and no head or ears. Consequently it could walk neither forward nor backward but waltzed sideways. "It is a triple cross," continued the Texan, "between a two timer and a three termer. It is particularly adapted for a journey up the middle of Salt Creek. It has no ears so it can hear no sound but it responds well to the bosses' whip."

"Where does it come from? Are there more? What is it called?" I asked.

"It is a fugitive from a bunch in Missouri," he replied "It is called Bob's shenanigan and the only noise it makes is a furious sound such as old men make when they whistle for a cab thru their store teeth."

KENNETH D. MCQUIGG.

WORTHLESS PROMISES.

Chicago, July 25.—Mr. Roosevelt, the commander in chief, believes that it is below his dignity to make campaign speeches before the coming election. What comes nearer to the truth is that Mr. Roosevelt, the smart politician, knows that his "again and again and again" promises are too well remembered by the people and that he cannot get away with any more of his campaign oratory. Instead, he clothes himself with the cloud of commander in chief and tries to get his glory out of that. A. E. W.

MORE DIRTY ALLEYS.

Chicago, July 7.—I, too, want to go on record as being disgusted with the dirty alleys. The rat situation in the alley of the 1800 block north between Karlov and Keystone avs. is so bad that the alley, sidewalks and garages are virtually being undermined. I made four trips to the 36th ward office to have the superintendent or foreman call on me in regards to the garbage containers there, but to no avail.

WHITE PAVING INQUIRY HITS STRANGE TRAIL

Kidnap Threats, Forgery Are Charged.

BY JAMES DOHERTY.

The technique used by the late Michael E. White, favored paving contractor of former city, county, and state administrations, to obtain money with which to make payments which do not show on the company's book—as he was charged with doing by his son and his granddaughters in federal court lawsuits—was revealed yesterday.

White's transactions figure in the grand jury investigation to be resumed this morning with Gilbert E. Keebler, former state administrative auditor, as one of the witnesses. Donald White, son of Michael E., and now president of White Consolidated, Inc., the paving company, is another witness called.

White's system, the state's attorney's office explained yesterday, featured the purchase of paid up insurance policies on relatives, and subsequent borrowing of cash on the policies. This cash could be used any way White desired without making entries on the paving company's books.

Kidnaping Threats Alleged.

In addition to alleged forgeries made in connection with the plan, the grand jury investigation last week is reported to have spotlighted several other unusual facts and charges, including the following:

1. That White's granddaughters said they were threatened with bodily harm and told their children would be kidnaped if the mothers appeared before the grand jury to testify regarding alleged forgeries in the making of loans on insurance policies in their names.

2. That the attorney for the granddaughters charged he was brutally assaulted and beaten because he would not take his clients before the grand jury to testify.

3. That "Schedule D" of the paving company's books, which should contain records and explanations of large and mysterious payments by the paving company to persons not named, is missing.

4. That alleged insurance forgeries were four years old before the state's attorney's office was told about them, altho they were known to White's associates.

Political Phase in Case.

The investigation, begun before the grand jury last Wednesday, was called "political" by Atty. Gen. George F. Barrett because State's Atty. Courtney is now the Democratic candidate for governor, opposing Gov. Green, Republican, who appointed Keebler to office. Courtney's answer was that Barrett asked him to obtain the indictment of Graeme Smith, an insurance broker, for allegedly forging the names of White's granddaughters to insurance loan applications and the resulting checks.

By Friday, the matter of indicting Smith had been sidetracked and the jury was investigating Keebler, who has been out of office for two years.

Courtney and his assistants, Wilbert F. Crowley and Vernon Thompson, indicated yesterday they intend to continue questioning Keebler.

Quizzed on Insurance Agency.

They said they asked Keebler if a man named White was interested in the Whitehall agency, which got a large share of the state's insurance business while Keebler was administrative auditor. Keebler said he knew only of a man named Hall in connection with the company—if there was anyone named White, he said he didn't know him.

Keebler's position yesterday was said to be that he is willing to answer any of the grand jury's questions about paving or what he did in his state job. However, it was explained in his behalf, he doesn't think Courtney or the grand jury has any right to "make a fishing expedition into his personal affairs."

Prosecutor to Press Case.

The state's attorney's office indicated it would press for a thoro investigation of all angles of alleged charges against Keebler by Atty. Charles F. Short Jr.

Courtney and his aids said they never knew Short or anything about his connection with White estate matters until last Wednesday. Then, they said, Short was presented to them by Assistant Atty. Gen. William C. Wines.

The "story of White's millions," as put together yesterday by the prosecutors, begins with the suit, filed against Michael White on Feb. 20, 1942, in federal District court in Chicago. This suit was filed by Edward W. White, of Milwaukee, Wis., a son of the paver.

Government Wins Tax Suit.

Michael White was then living in Boynton, Fla. He was known to Chicagoans as one of the leading figures in a paving clique that barred all opposition in Chicago, Cook county, and downstate. The government had sued and collected more than $800,000 in 1929 in delinquent income taxes from White, who was a friend of the politicians then in control of city and county governments.

Edward W. White was represented in this lawsuit by Atty. Robert Hilliard, who has offices in the Conway building. The suit set forth figures to show that in the 10 years ended March 31, 1941, White Consolidated, Inc., had a gross income of $19,518,706, of which gross profits were listed at $4,657,583.

$40,000 Settlement Reported.

A witness before the grand jury, Philip Kelly, bookkeeper for the paving firm, is said to have testified that this lawsuit was settled by the payment of $40,000.

After the death of Michael White, it was proposed in behalf of his estate to sue an insurance company of Toronto, Ont., thru which White had made "loans." Atty. Irving Herriott, in behalf of the estate and of the trustees of the various trust funds set up by White, was to bring the suits.

It became known then, according to statements made yesterday, that Smith, friend and adviser for Michael White, would be a witness for the insurance company and would say the loans were actually made to White.

The insurance "loans" came to the official attention of the insurance department of the state of Illinois. Smith was denied a renewal of his state license as an insurance broker last spring on the ground his conduct was "unbecoming an insurance agent." He was ordered to discontinue acting as an insurance agent.

Atty. Hilliard, acting for Smith, obtained an injunction from Judge Walter Labuy, then a state judge but now on the federal bench, restraining the state from interfering with Smith's activities.

Attorney Withholds Defense.

Atty. Hilliard said he has no intention at this time of revealing Smith's defense to the charge of forgery, of which he said Smith is innocent. He said, however, that Short did not accuse Smith; he only asked Smith about the loans and Smith answered freely.

The state's attorney's office was advised that Smith said there was nothing wrong with his signing the granddaughters' names to the documents at White's request.

About that time, it was admitted, Barrett telephoned First Assistant State's Atty. Crowley, asking for the indictment of Smith. Barrett said the case had been referred to him by the state insurance department.

Prosecutor Assigned to Case.

Crowley said he consented to let Barrett have an assistant attorney general present the evidence, but assigned Assistant State's Atty. Thompson, who is also a certified public accountant, to be present. Thompson had considerable experience in insurance matters, it was said.

Crowley and Thompson asked Assistant Atty. Gen. Wines to produce the "aggrieved parties" before the grand jury, referring to Mrs. Dunphy and Mrs. Joyce, the granddaughters.

When and where threats were said to have been made to the women was not revealed, but Courtney's office asserted: "The women said they were threatened with bodily harm and that their children would be kidnaped if they went before the grand jury."

Attorney Charges Beating.

Short, in notifying the state's attorney's office that Mrs. Dunphy would not appear voluntarily before the grand jury, said he had been the victim of assault which he blamed on his refusal to urge her to change her mind. Short asserted he was slugged by four men who forced his automobile to the curb one night last spring and took him out and beat him, without giving him any explanation.

Last night the prosecutors said they expected the present grand jury to spend most of this week on the "paving matter." Thompson said an audit of the White books and the various trust funds set up by the paving boss would take at least three months.

Hollywood, Cal., July 30 (AP). — Charles Chaplin and his fourth wife, the former Oona O'Neill, daughter of playwright Eugene O'Neill, are awaiting arrival of a baby within a few days. Her friends say she will go to a hospital tomorrow.

The 18 year old Oona and Chaplin, 54, were married in Carpinteria, Cal., in June, 1943, shortly before Joan Berry sued the movie comedian, naming him as the father of her then unborn daughter.

Chaplin is scheduled to defend himself against the paternity suit Dec. 23. Chaplin was acquitted on Mann act charges involving Miss Berry.

3 STATES TO PUT 10,000 NAZIS ON JOBS TOMORROW

Approximately 10,000 German prisoners of war will be at work processing food crops in Illinois, Wisconsin, and Michigan by tomorrow, the army's 6th service command headquarters in Chicago announced yesterday. Illinois and Wisconsin will be allotted about 2,800 prisoners each and Michigan will have 4,500.

The principal work in Illinois and Wisconsin will be processing the corn crop; in Michigan, the prisoners will help in processing fruit and corn. This work is expected to continue until Sept. 30. Packing companies have contracted with the army for the prisoner labor.

Three new branch camps are being established in Illinois, with approximately 200 prisoners in Eureka, Woodford county; 450 in Milford, Iroquois county, and 250 in Gibson City, Ford county. In addition, there will be 450 in Hoopeston, Vermilion county; 250 in Hampshire, Kane county; 175 in Lanark, Carroll county, and about 1,100 working out of the prisoner of war camp at Camp Grant near Rockford.

WAR LOAN DRIVE TO END TODAY; CITY NEAR GOAL

The fifth war loan drive in Chicago and Cook county and thruout the nation will end at noon today, altho all bond purchases which are processed thru Federal Reserve banks up to midnight will be counted. Philip H. Clarke, chairman of the drive, yesterday predicted that this area will make its "E" bond quota for the first time in Chicago's history. Purchases must be completed by noon to be counted.

Up to noon yesterday, Clarke reported, "E" bond purchases were $115,500,000, or less than 10 millions short of the quota of 125 millions. There was no letup in the campaign and treasury department sound trucks remained on the job to spur sales.

Clarke said that final figures probably would be ready Thursday or Friday.

DESPERATELY NEEDED! Waste paper is needed for containers for blood plasma, food, ammunition, and some 700,000 other war supplies. Save a bundle a week and save a boy's life.

July 30, 1944.

HEAVY thundershowers of last week on middle western fields were welcomed mainly for their importance to the valuable corn crop, but they also brought new life to numerous wildflowers.

Within a few days after the rains the cardinal flowers started flaunting their brilliant red flags from the streambeds, the first goldenrod came into bloom, and the tall, fragile stems of the compass plants opened their pale yellow blossoms.

Rains Swell Flower Parade.

In addition to bringing out these new summer flowers, the rains washed the faces of the dust covered bergamot, brightened the blue-purple chicory petals, and introduced new batches of wild sunflowers and coneflowers for the midsummer wildflower parade, with its varied assortment of white, yellow, blue, purple, and red participants.

All of these wildflowers, with the possible exception of the cardinal flowers, can be seen alongside most country roads and railway sidings in the middle west.

Cardinal Flowers Colorful.

The cardinal flowers are so particular about their growing locations, and so susceptible to abuse from wildflower pickers, that there are few large colonies left in Illinois. They grow in and adjacent to streambeds, and their bright red flower spikes are so colorful that it takes a fence proofed against "flower lovers" to keep them from being destroyed.

Gordon Pearsall, naturalist of the Illinois department of conservation, says he believes the stand of cardinal flowers on the Wheaton farm is the largest in Illinois, containing several thousand plants in a half mile stretch of the farm creek.

Humming Birds Helpful.

One of the common fallacies about the cardinal flower is that it is entirely dependent upon the humming bird for pollination. The corolla tubes of this flower are long and slender, somewhat like those of the snapdragon. Bees cannot reach the nectar at the base of these tubes; therefore, cannot pollinate this wild flower.

It's true that the long beaked humming bird is one of the principal distributors of the flower pollen, but Pearsall explains that hawk moths and sphinx moths also feed on the cardinal flower and spread the pollen.

★The GARDEN★

IT is generally recognized that sweet corn is not a practical crop for the small home garden, because it requires too much growing space for the amount of food it produces. However, sweet corn from home plots is tastier than that bought in stores, because it can be harvested and eaten the same day; most sweet corn handled in markets is picked two to four days before being sold.

To get full advantage of the extra freshness, gardeners should pick the corn ears at the proper stage of development, because they are in the prime harvest stage for only three or four days. As the best stage is approaching, the developing kernels force a tightening of the husks, so when the ears fill out they are almost ready for picking.

Another test is that of pinching the kernels to determine when they are in milk stage, the prime period for harvesting. After being picked, sweet corn should be used within 24 hours, preferably the same day.

More people going more miles often crowd Wabash trains

FOR every traveler who rode the Wabash in pre-war 1938, three and three-tenths passengers got aboard our trains in 1943. Each passenger traveled farther last year, the average trip being 47 miles longer. Longer trips required more baggage. These trends are continuing.

Therefore, you often find reservations hard to get, trains crowded and service lacking some of the luxuries but still efficient. Carrying passengers on missions essential to the war or to wartime morale is part of our Service For Victory.

CIO DICTATES MICHIGAN SLATE FOR DEMOCRATS

State Ticket Selected at Convention.

Grand Rapids, Mich., July 30 [Special].—Bearing CIO approval, the Democratic state ticket is complete following a noisy convention yesterday in the Civic auditorium here.

Richard T. Frankensteen of Detroit, vice president of the United Automobile Workers, largest CIO union, and a leader of the CIO's national political action committee, played a dominant role in the convention, exercising a veto power on all candidates regarded by him as unacceptable to labor.

Denounces Nowicki.

Leo J. Nowicki of Detroit, former lieutenant governor and now a lieutenant colonel in the army, was one potential candidate lopped off by Frankensteen's CIO axe. Nowicki had notified E. Cyril Bevan of Pontiac, Democratic national committeeman, that he would accept nomination for auditor general.

When Nowicki's name was presented to the convention, Frankensteen rose to denounce the former lieutenant governor for his actions during the Michigan sit down strikes several years ago. The CIO chieftain said Nowicki had done "a hatchet job" on Gov. Frank Murphy by threatening state interference as acting governor while Gov. Murphy was in Washington.

Frankensteen's objections to Nowicki were sufficient to bring about rejection of his candidacy by the convention.

Democratic Ticket.

Candidates chosen were: Thurman B. Doyle of Menominee, former assistant United States attorney here, for attorney general; Arthur A. Koscinski, Detroit attorney and Polish leader, for secretary of state; Mrs. Minnie Schwinger of Saginaw, vice chairman of the party's state committee, for state treasurer, and Clark J. Adams of Pontiac, member of the lower house of the state legislature, for auditor general.

These candidates round out a ticket headed by Edward J. Fry of Fremont and James L. Lee of Detroit. Fry and Lee were nominated for governor and lieutenant governor in the recent party primary.

The bride is a niece of Mrs. Walter R. Kirk and of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Arthur Tilt of Lake Shore dr., and her grandmother, Mrs. Joseph B. Tilt of Pasadena formerly lived here.

The ceremony is set for 4:30 p. m. Friday in the Church of Our Saviour, San Gabriel, Cal. Engagements Announced.

At a tea yesterday in their home in Winnetka, Mr. and Mrs. Clarence L. Mellor announced the engagement of their daughter, Shirley Madeline, to Ensign Edward G. Welch, son of Mr. and Mrs. Edward M. Welch of Oakland, Cal. Here for the party was one of Miss Mellor's classmates at Connecticut college, Miss Carol Chandler of New Britain, Conn., who is her house guest.

Miss Mellor, a graduate of the Roycemore school, will return to Connecticut college in the fall for her senior year. Her fiancé, a graduate of the University of California at Berkeley, is on active submarine duty with the navy. The wedding will take place on his next leave.

Mr. and Mrs. Victor L. Chiquoine of Winnetka are announcing the engagement of their daughter, Janice Gibson, to Joseph M. Cogar, son of Mrs. William B. Cogar of Midway, Ky. and the late Mr. Cogar. The afternoon church ceremony will be followed by a reception in the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Carlton Smith.

En route to the wedding Miss Moffett and Miss Ann Breese of Albuquerque, N. M., stopped over to be Miss McKenna's guests. Miss Moffett, a former young Chicagoan now living in Kensington, Md., will be maid of honor for Miss Smith, who was her roommate at the Sandia school in New Mexico and at Bennington. Miss Moffett and Miss McKenna will return to Bennington when classes are resumed.

Before Miss Elizabeth Browne enters Vassar college in September, she will have an extended holiday in the east. The Aldis J. From there she will go to Hyannisport, Mass., to see her grandparents, the Secor Cunninghams, en route to Jericho, N. Y., for a visit with her fiancé's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Jack I. Straus. If Pvt. Looking at Hollywood

By Hedda Hopper

HOLLYWOOD, Cal., July 30.—Maria Montez had a letter from Pierre Aumont telling about his meeting in Italy with Marlene Dietrich. Marlene, while gossiping with him, said that Maria was about to divorce her husband. He blurted out, "You mean my Maria?" "No," she said, "mine—my daughter, Maria Manton." And she is. . . . Ida Lupino's hoping Warners bought "Voice of the Turtle" for her. . . . Barry Fitzgerald is making plans. He's rounding up the Abbey players, and the minute the war's over, he wants to use them to produce the first picture made on Irish soil, "The Plow and the Stars." Barry hasn't been home since 1937. . . . Esther Fernandez leaves next week to make "The Sweet" in Mexico City with an all-Mexican cast. . . . Susan Hayward may not do "High Above the Stars." Jane Powell will be starred in it. . . . If David Selznick lingers in New York, his ever-loving partner, Charlie Chaplin, will try to have him served with a summons in that United Artists suit.

Warners Are Woo-Wooing.

Warners are wooing Rosina Lawrence, hoping she'll play Marilyn Miller's life. Rosina's now married to Judge Juvenal Marchisio, president of American Relief for Italy, Inc. She played Marilyn in "The Great Ziegfeld." . . . Lee Tumell and Myra Williams have been signed by Twentieth from the New York Copacabana show, which brings the list from there to us up to 43. That includes June Allyson and Lucile Bremer. . . . "This is the Army" is doing such a morale building job for men at the front that the government's thinking of sending it to South Pacific bases. . . . Bonita Granville is testing for a role in "Czarina." . . . Capt. John Carroll is at Birmingham hospital for another three weeks. He tells me all the G. I. Joes he's talked with would do anything for Lt. Gen. George Patton. John won't leave the army until the war's over. Said he, "You certainly rocked the fellows in our section of the Mediterranean one night. There were about 65 officers present, when one of them read a smidge from your column in which there was a typographical error. It ran that I, being a lieutenant, was an aide to a captain. They rolled with laughter, whereupon I got up to say, 'Let me tell you, fellows, Miss Hopper knows all about the army. I told her all about it before I left Hollywood'." Then they exploded.

Our Jack the Ripper.

Laird Cregar, since his return here, has kept strictly silent about his 15 year old fan, Judith Merston, who ran away from home to see him play in Stamford, Conn. She was picked up by John Law, jumped out of a window and broke her leg. I hope Laird made her stay in the hospital pleasant. Such affection should be rewarded with a roomful of flowers. But he won't talk. . . . What well known star bet his wife she couldn't stay on the wagon till Jan. 1, but is offering bets of 10 to 1 to his friends that she'll fall off long before that? . . . The marriage of Lt. Jay Gould III. and Nigel Bruce's daughter, in two months, will really be the social event of the season. . . . It's great news that Ward Bond will not lose his leg. But he'll be in the hospital five or six months.

How Movies Are Born.

The story behind one of our top pictures goes thus: Studio readers read the book and sent a memo to the boss. It was too thin to make into a movie. Then, during a Scotch mist in New York, the head man's partner bought the story for a very large sum, came back to the coast and told the good news. The genius said, "I think I have a memo about that story here somewhere." But it was never found. Then it was necessary to get rid of the girl who typed the memo. She was asked to do a first draft of the story. When it was turned in, she was told her work was impossible and was fired. . . . Hanley Stafford is made to order for "Family Man," which is all about soap operas. It opens at the Belasco theater here Aug. 1. He's been Daddy Snooks for so long he knows all about dizzy dames. With him will be Sarah Selby, Margaret Batton and Frank Parker. . . . Jack Larue's Italian friends insist he's the ideal man to play Victor Jappolo in "A Bell for Adano." Now I'm told the story hasn't yet been cleared by Washington for the screen.

Thru the Looking Glass

We're giving sun bathers and vacationists fair warning—if you want to preserve the loveliness of your tresses, use a protective hair dressing or wear some sort of head covering when out of doors for any protracted period of time. The hair doesn't blister or smart and give warning of danger as does the skin, but the effects of too much sun and wind show up finally in a strawlike, lifeless look that robs the hair of its natural beauty.

In the last few days we've seen some pretty sad examples of sun scorched hair, and the perturbed victims admit that it's the result of neglect and indifference on their own part. They want a quick remedy for the situation, and much as we would like to help, there is no overnight cure that we know of. Plenty of work at home or at a beauty shop is necessary to restore the hair to order. Oil treatments, applications of creamy dressings and vigorous sessions with a hair brush are steps that must be taken to bring luster and life to the locks, and they take time.

That is why we urge women to use the ounce of prevention instead of letting nature work havoc and then frantically trying to repair the damage.

—o—

There are several good protective dressings on the market designed especially to shield the locks from the devastating effects of too much sun and wind. It's a simple piece of business to use them before going out on the beach or golf course, and the freedom from worry they insure is reason enough to take the little time they require to apply. These are the best bet for those who like to let the hair blow free in the breeze when out in the open.

If you'd rather not bother with the dressings, at least wrap the head in a bandanna or wear a brimmed hat before venturing out in the sun and wind. It's the smart thing to do and will save you time, money, and discomfort in the long run. LOUISE DOOLEY.

Kurtz's Adieu Tuned to Bright Ravinia Sunday

Overture to "Masaniello".....Auber
Symphony No. 94, "Surprise"..Haydn
Three Dances from "Gayne".....
.....Khachaturian
[First performance in Chicago.]
Overture, "Fingal's Cave".Mendelssohn
"Batuque," from the suite, "Reisado do Pastoreio".....Fernandez
[First performance in Chicago.]
"Gaité Parisienne".....Offenbach

BY CLAUDIA CASSIDY.

Efrem Kurtz's Ravinia farewell with the Chicago Symphony orchestra was a gay crazy quilt of a concert, made up of a lot of bright patches with no attempt at pattern but plenty of decorative splash. It filled a perfect Sunday afternoon with persuasive listening and ended with the foaming brilliance of "Gaité Parisienne," the score of Offenbach odds and ends so expertly spun together by the Russian conductor for Massine's heady ballet.

The Offenbach was a repetition from Saturday night and perhaps not quite so deftly played—it had the spirit but not invariably the sparkle—but it was still enchanting music in the best Offenbach tradition, and it gave nostalgic balletomanes vintage memories of Massine's Peruvian, of the best can-can in ballet, and of that melting waltz, preferably with Danilova as the glove seller and Franklin as the baron. Perhaps, on second thought, it ought to be illegal to play "Gaité Parisienne" without the ballet—unless you permit the customers to dance in the aisles.

Mr. Kurtz has a special flair for theater music, and yesterday he introduced two other dance scores, both new to Chicago and both worth hearing. One was the Negro ritual, "Batuque," from a suite by the Brazilian composer, Fernández, that sounded right for the Katherine Dunham dancers, but would want Archie Savage back in the troupe for the central role. Typical jungle music, opening with ominous mutterings and rising into incantation over a rhythmical drum beat, its reiterated pattern is suddenly slashed by trumpets and braked to a shuddering finale. It is brief, fierce, and hypnotic.

The longer score was three excerpts from "Gaynne," a new soviet ballet by Khachaturian, whose piano concerto was played at Ravinia last summer by William Kapell, under Mr. Kurtz's direction. Vivid, highly colored, melodious, it opens with a "Dance of the Rose Girls" that is not to be confused with a rose adagio. On the contrary, the girls might easily have daggers in their teeth. The lullaby is a charming thing, first sung in the woodwind, then amplified by the strings, and the "Dance of the Sabers" cuts a sharp glittering path with the edged insistence of the xylophone.

In the midst of all this came Haydn's G major symphony, and for once the "Surprise" nickname earned its keep. But perhaps good music refuses to clash, even as colors in flowers, because Haydn's subtle precisions held their own classic place in all this exotic brilliance, and reflected nothing but warmth from unaccustomed surroundings. Mendelssohn got in on the good neighbor policy, too, with his "Fingal's Cave," and there was a rarely heard operatic overture, Auber's tuneful flourish to "Masaniello," which is no "Fra Diavolo," but an almost Verdian tale of betrayal, revenge, murder, and spectacular suicide. All this sounds odd on paper, but it sounded all right in concert, perhaps because a good orchestra and a good conductor had met on firm musical ground.

Bach Family Holds Reunion Without Music

BY KAY CLANCY.

The Bach family, descendants of Johann Sebastian Bach, the German composer, who could have set the family laundry list to music, held a family reunion yesterday at Merrillville, in Lake county, Ind. But there wasn't an outstanding musician among them.

Virtually every one of the 60 known members of the clan has taken music lessons in the hope of fanning a spark of musical genius into life. They have all practiced scales, but none claims special talent.

"We just aren't the musical Bachs that Europe knew and loved so well for 200 years," William G. Bach, 61, of Hobart, Ind., elected patriarch of the family, explained. "We take more after Johann Sebastian's grandfather, who was a baker and miller, and quite a zither player."

But that doesn't mean the American Bachs do not like and appreciate music. There is Mrs. Lydia Bach Frank, 76, oldest living descendant of Gottlob Bach, who was born in Germany in 1812 and came to America in 1846. She is familiar with the compositions of the composer, and, like the musician, she excelled as an organist in her younger days. She still occasionally plays hymns for the Hobart Methodist church.

The best the other Bachs can do is thump out a few tunes on the piano. But they like the radio. In fact, Mrs. Hattie Bach Kuehl, 70, who lives in an old frame house near Merrillville, says the cows on the Bach homestead are milked morning and night while the radio blares out nocturnes, polkas, concertos, and swing.

Radio, which has brought the best of music into every household, has spoiled would-be musicians, William Bach believes. "When you can get all the music you want by turning a button, why bother with playing an instrument?" he asked. He said some of Bach's posterity might have turned composer had it been necessary for them to provide their own music.

The American Bachs are still optimistic that an heir presumptive to the musical throne will yet be born. "There was a time when musicians were known as 'Bachs' in Europe even when members of the family were no longer living there," William Bach related. "And—who knows?—maybe such will be the case again."

Puzzled Girls Are Advised by The Solid Side

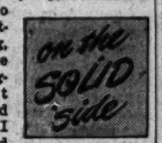
[Copyright: 1944: By The Chicago Tribune.]



"It's the same old problem: I like a boy. . . . Anyway, he and his family used to live in our apartment building, but then we were both much younger and just scrapped and had fun together. I never really liked him then, but now it's different. They have moved to a different part of town, and I still see him occasionally. My mother and dad go to visit his family and I go with them. He is pleasant enough and I couldn't ask for a better friend. He is a clean cut fellow, and I know my parents think he is wonderful, too. But he treats me just like a sister. I'd like very much to have a real date with him . . ."

Next time you and your family go for a visit, why not suggest to young jackson that you and he get together some time to play tennis, swim, or whatever else you might think of which wouldn't be asking him for a date in black and white? Dream boys are human, too, and he probably would enjoy the idea. Besides, that will give you a chance to show him you can be a good friend and a good date, too!

"I am a junior in high school and for two years, on and off, I dated the boy who lives next door to us. He got the impression he had a priority on me and told all the other fellows to keep away. There was a particular sailor friend of his whom he did not want me to meet and when I did Don didn't speak to me for a week. Later he asked me to go to a party with him and that evening suggested we go steady. I had heard that he had told some one he was 'off women for good,' so I told him no. He has never been the same to me and seems to have changed in other ways. His mother is blaming me for his late hours, when I haven't been with him for a month. I would like to square myself with his mother and would like to date Don again, too."

If a boy is jealous, sulky, and not too honest, he isn't the most perfect tall, dark, and handy a honeychile might find. Why not try dating other interesting characters for a few weeks? By that time the boy next door should have recovered from the blow to his pride and be back in the interested date department. If you still feel a glow for the jackson, both of you can pick up where you left off.

The only way to "square" yourself with the boy's mother is to tell her frankly that you haven't been dating young Joe these last few weeks, but don't bother explaining unless she asks you about the late hours herself. It might be just another worry you dreamed up in one of your blue moments.

Women in War Work

Capt. Knott.

Staff members of Henrotin hospital recently were informed that the institution's director of nurses for the last six years, Katharine L. Knott, now on military leave, has been promoted to captain "somewhere in England." She heads an army nursing unit.

A recent letter from Capt. Knott described the outdoor calisthenics which convalescent soldiers enjoy and which help to rehabilitate them, and the "luxuries," such as bed sheets and hot food, prized by men wounded in combat.

Twenty-five physicians and 35 nurses from Henrotin are in uniform. Three of the nurses, in addition to Capt. Knott, are on foreign duty; Lt. Frances Doran, Lt. Hazel Morton, and Lt. Genevieve Pearl.

—o—

Twenty nurses from Chicago and nearby communities were sworn into the army nurse corps as 2d lieutenants recently, thus helping to meet the army's national quota of 1,000 new enlistments a month for the next few months.

The army nurse corps, the Red Cross, and the war man power commission are engaged in procurement campaigns to draw nurses from civilian life for service in army installations.

The 20 recruits announced by headquarters of the 6th service command have reported to Camp McCoy, Sparta, Wis., for military training. Chicagoans include Genevieve Ahern, Marjorie Peterson, Marie Reimer, Antoinette Topor, Frances Tremper, Irene Voit, Sylvia Watson, Bette Felter, Virginia M. Smith, Wanda Klos, Eunice Carrier, Louise Seever, and Alvera Olsen.

The other seven lieutenants are Catherine Neal, North Chicago; Lillian Kolar, Berwyn; Ruth Willens, Evanston; Elizabeth Schachtner, Wilmette; Mildred Hartmann, Joliet; Jane Marshall, West Chicago, and Esther Simson, Arlington Heights.

It's summer housecleaning time in the more than 60 day rooms in buildings at Fort Sheridan, and blue uniformed members of the Fort Sheridan Volunteers are doing the job under the direction of Mrs. Harry Kerr of Wilmette, executive chairman.

Mrs. Ray Garrett.

They are replacing faded curtains, supplying new furniture, having pianos tuned and radios repaired, and doing some painting. The day room furnishings and decorations were originally the project of the Volunteers.

Mrs. Ray Garrett, Evanston, chairman, visits the fort five or six days a week, maintaining 20 of the rooms. On several days a week, soldiers bring their mending for the women to do. The Volunteers also provide refreshments for special events at the installation. Every month Mrs. Garrett and her staff sponsor a formal dance in the Service club.

Serving with Mrs. Kerr on the board are Mrs. Donald Cook, Winnetka, secretary, and Mrs. Bernard Newman, Highland Park, treasurer. City and suburban chairmen are Mrs. Chester Ihle, Chicago; Mrs. Walter Marx, Kenilworth; Mrs. Garrett, Evanston; Mrs. James P. Harding, Winnetka; Mrs. John Sweeney, Glencoe; Mrs. Alan Kidd, Ravinia, and Mrs. Chase Smith, Highland Park.

White Collar GIRL

BY RUTH MAC KAY

Vacation at Home.

Would it interest you to know how a WCG had a two weeks' vacation at home on four gallons of gas [two for each week] and less than $10 spending money? Back at her desk she's brown as a berry, has stopped taking vitamins, and is getting more work done in an hour than before she did in half a day. Her program was something like this:

Every other morning drove to beach for sun tanning and swim, carrying a health lunch and a book. One afternoon to Chicago Historical society, another for a sail with a friend from Chicago Yacht club; two other afternoons out to Skokie lagoon to fish [caught two bass, six blue gills, and an extra coat of tan]; an hour a day spent letter writing.

Four of the evenings she went by bus to Grant park to hear the army band with Bob Eberle singing and the navy band; twice she went to hear the Grant Park Symphony with Igor Gorin and Hertha Glas. One Sunday afternoon she traveled by North Shore electric to Ravinia carrying a picnic lunch shared by two friends. [The trip cost about $3.] One evening she saw "Going My Way," and another she betook herself to a French restaurant where she always had wanted to go. The rest of the time she read three best sellers [on the back porch]. She saved enough to buy a war bond, and says it was one of the pleasantest holidays she has had in years.

POOR RICHARD.

Now I'll Tell One.

These white collar girls who brag about their employers should see our office. As of last week there was an addition to the male personnel—a personable young male, to be exact, nice mannered, who even asks his stenographer: "Would you like to take a letter to. . . . ?"

Yesterday when one of the girls called up to say she was ill and would not be in he told her to take the rest of the week off and went to call on her with flowers after office hours. After intense cross-examination he said he would do that for any one of the girls in his department who was ill. Now, isn't our office definitely in the lead?

Obedience Not Gained Thru Use of Force

[Copyright: 1944: By News Syndicate Co., Inc.]

"My husband and I constantly disagree about the management of our two children. Jerry is 4 years old and Janet is 3. Of course they both are on the go from the time they waken in the morning until their heads are safely on their pillows at night. My husband thinks I'm too soft with them, too patient, and that's why they are so troublesome. He believes it's best to wade into a situation and demand instant obedience, without any why's or but's. In other words, use force," writes a troubled mother.

Forcing children to obey only causes more friction. Spanking and punishment are futile ways of attempting to gain an enduring type of obedience. Let's see what other ways there are to gain it, ways that are fundamentally and lastingly good.

In the first place, obedience is not a thing that we want to enforce. We want to gain it in the least obvious way and with the least possible friction. The less your child sees of the mechanics of how you achieve it, the better. We don't subscribe to this "obey me this instant" sort of thing.

The idea is to make a child want to do the thing he should do. And this is not a far fetched slant on the problem at all. Children intelligently handled, which means being understood and given all possible freedom, are surprisingly receptive to most of the many things required of them in the course of a day.

One of the things which greatly helps a mother to manage her child wisely is her recognition of the fact that obedience is not a virtue in itself, but a tool used to get certain things accomplished for the good of her child.

To get a child happily and smoothly thru the routines of bathing, dressing, and eating, to protect him from certain dangers, she needs to enlist his coöperation, which means his obedience.

The other thing that helps a mother is the ability, or rather the imaginative power, that makes it possible for her to understand her child's point of view.

With the right attitude as a background and with the definite suggestions which will appear in this column soon, no mother should fail in her efforts to gain her child's obedience. And the use of force as a means is completely ruled out.

INSTALMENT I.
NIGHT IN AFRICA.

It was sunset, and time for her to get out of bed, but Lt. Carol Melton snuggled her red-gold head deeper into the warmth of her narrow cot and turned one large, expressive eye balefully upon the alarm clock which was about to explode into imperious sound.

For a moment she thought that she was back in Kansas and that the alarm would sound in order to get her down thru the bitter winter morning in time to catch the school bus at the farm gate; the bus where Bright, the boy from the next farm, would be waiting, his freckled face grinning from ear to ear, ready to take books from her. Then the mosaic pattern in the niche which held the noisy American clock became apparent to her sleep drenched vision and she remembered. This was not Kansas, this was North Africa. She came awake with the clear suddenness of perfect health and youth, but lay still for another minute, luxuriating in the consciousness of being warm.

"I'm ungrateful as a bill collector!" she told herself, reproachfully. "This is heaven after the mud floors and unlighted tents we had out on the desert. It's not exactly a medical center, but I'm shot with luck, being transferred here!"

The alarm clock went off with the explosive vigor of a time bomb, and was promptly silenced by another nurse who slept within arm's reach of it. Carol sat up and stretched her long body. All down the line the night shift was coming to life, stirring from the narrow army cots which looked so incongruous in what had only a little while before been the refectory of Algiers' most ancient French convent.

"Doughnuts in Africa!" Carol fixed stern gray eyes upon her. "If you're lying, I'll use up your last lipstick marking my fever charts!"

"It's true!" Butch insisted. "The cook over with engineers used to make them in a window on Broadway, and he's mooey over our cook. So on his free day he comes here and makes doughnuts for us in order to be in the kitchen with his honeychile!"

"God bless love!" said Carol solemnly.

"Hey, Kansas, that reminds me!" It was the husky voice of Smithy, the big, bony ex-vaudevillian. "How's it making with you and your heartbeat, the colonel?"

For an instant a hot wave of indignation swept over Carol. How had they found out about Col. Barlow? She had never so much as hinted at his interest in her. She had even tried to ignore it thru the long weeks of nursing him, except for that first night when he had been brought in from the front badly wounded. Then she had held his hand and comforted him, just as any other nurse would have done. He should not, must not, be talked about lightly. He was too fine, too important, a staff officer of the high command, distinguished and, unaccountably—unmarried. But these girls seemed to find out everything.

"The only heartbeat I've had so far in this war," she said, "I got from running to the hospital because I was late."

"If you don't go for Barlow," Smithy persisted, "you're plain dumb. Why, he's the equivalent of a big time producer!"

It was true that Col. Barlow had everything, Carol thought, except the power to attract her. She had never felt "exactly right," as she put it to herself, about anybody except Bright Stoner, back home, and she hadn't seen him since she was 16 and her mother had taken her and her twin sister, Lita, back to southern France, after their father's death. Carol did not even know what had become of Bright, what he had grown up to be,

He had lived with his widowed mother and young sister on a quarter section which was mostly dry arroyo, and even during school days Bright had done a man's work on their land. The last time Carol had been back home she learned that the entire family had moved away, tho they still owned the farm. There was only one relative left in town: Uncle Joe Stoner, an elderly man who seemed to know little or nothing about the family's movements. But in spite of all this Bright Stoner had kept his place in Carol's heart. He was a year older than she was. That would make him 24.

There had been other men, of course, since those school days. The trouble was that Brighton Stoner had an extra something which had stood between her and all the other men she met. Now he was standing between her and the unspoken interest of this splendid soldier.

Carol went to the mirror and adjusted the soft white kerchief which had replaced the stiff little nurse's cap of former days. The beautiful face which stared back at her from the wavy glass she regarded not as her own, but as that of Lita, her identical twin, the younger, gentler Lita, whom she had worshipped and mothered ever since she could remember. Curiously enough, she always regarded their mutual beauty as exclusively Lita's, and inevitably experienced this odd sensation of looking at her sister when she faced a mirror.

"I know she's all right," Carol thought. "If she were ill or in physical danger I would feel it as I always have."

After a certain period of separation there was always this ache to be reunited with Lita, this awful sense of incompleteness. It was different, Carol felt sure, from the loneliness of a mother for her child, or even the spiritual hunger a woman might feel for an absent husband or lover. Sooner or later one or the other of the twins would take the necessary step, make the inevitable journey, and they would be together once more, ending the curious, almost physical pain of overlong separation.

But now war had trapped them—one in France, one in North Africa, and it had begun to seem as tho they would just have to bear it—and grin if they could.

"But we will be together again," Carol told herself. "It has to be. So it will be."

The 7 to 7 night shift was on its way out now, their sturdy campaign shoes making a vast clatter along the paved cloisters. In the dim past before the coming of the French this section of the convent had been the women's courtyard of some caid's palace, and every evening at the same hour a blind old horse driven by an elfin French girl child turned the winch which filled the center pool from the well below and fed the circles of time worn stone washtubs where the American army nurses washed their clothes.

'One Is Missing' . . . . . By H. Vernor Dixon

(Copyright: 1944: By H. Vernor Dixon.)

When Jed finally regained full consciousness he found himself in the bunk of a tiny steel room that was packed with charts and navigating instruments. He was swathed in bandages and had difficulty moving his arms. He turned his head to look at Bart squatting on his heels by the side of the bunk.

"Thanks. I guess I've been out for some time. Where are we?"

Jed's mind swam and red spots danced before his eyes. With Bart's help, he forced himself to sit up in the bunk. His head cleared and he managed to swing his legs over the edge of the bunk. He was breathing hard and every muscle and nerve in his body cried in protest.

Jed said, "You've certainly stuck by me, Bart."

"We took turns. Miss Nolan and I."

Jed nodded. "Yes. I should have known that." He reached for a robe on the wall. While tying it, he asked, "Did you say Sydney, Australia?"

"But the Frenchman, Comdr. Loring——"

Bart shook his head, "Gone," he said. "He was really the only Vichy sympathizer amongst them all. When the crew mutinied they took care of him." Jed stared at him uncomprehendingly and Bart hastened to explain: "There's been an invasion in North Africa, the French colonies. American and British troops. Darlan ordered the vessels of the French fleet to put into allied or neutral harbors. Some of them were scuttled at Toulon. When the crew of this sub heard it over the radio they almost went crazy. They dumped the commander, took over the ship and headed for Australia."

They laughed together, and Jed slapped his massive shoulders. He moved weakly to the steel door, opened it and stepped directly into the control room. Four seamen, busy at their gauges and instruments, nodded to him. They said something in French and the four of them laughed together. A shaft of sunlight was streaming down from the open conning tower over the room. Mae Nolan was standing in the light, dressed in sailor's dungarees and an old sweat shirt.

Jed held to one of the overhead pipes and faced her. He looked about him. Bart and the sailors had disappeared. Jed walked to Mae and stopped close before her. Her lips moved to form words, but they were smothered by the emotion welling up within her.

"Where are the others," Jed asked. "On deck?"

She shook her head. She rubbed the back of her hand over her mouth and at last said, "They were taken off last night by one of our own destroyers. It's leading the way into harbor. Banning is wanted in the states."

"I know. But Ellen and Riddell—"

She looked uneasily away from him and said, "I persuaded the destroyer captain to take them, too."

Jed was about to ask, "Why," but he knew the answer. His arms went gently about her shoulders. She looked into his eyes and her own widened and became soft. Her fingertips touched his bandaged arms and she sighed and leaned her head against his chest.

There was a shout from the deck above and the slap of a line against the steel hull. Jed looked up and said, "Shall we go above?"

CIO TO ENTER FM FIELD WITH OWN RADIO STATIONS

Unions Told to Get Licenses Now.

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Washington, D. C., July 30.—The Congress of Industrial Organizations is planning to add the control and ownership of radio stations to its sideline activities which already include the establishment of a political organization to fight for a fourth term for the New Deal, it was disclosed today.

The CIO News, a weekly publication, today urged unions to make applications to the federal communications commission now for frequency modulation licenses which, it said, in time of labor disputes will "insure labor a chance to get its story to the public." The possibilities for labor are breath-taking, it said.

Monopoly Charged.

"On all major issues—cost of living, full employment, reconversion, international affairs—labor can use FM to make its views known and its position appreciated," the paper said.

Asserting that FM is the "answer to a half dozen prayers," the paper describes FM as "small stuff now" but the medium that "may give labor a chance to compete successfully with the soap operas."

Early Action Urged.

"Hence it is absolutely imperative for labor and other peoples' organizations to get in their applications now to FCC if they are not to be left out in the cold in FM broadcasting," the CIO paper said. "Delay will mean that commercial interests will sew up the field, and labor—if it wants to buy time or stations—will find itself confronted with all the old censorship restrictions and with prices prohibitive for all except the wealthy.

"The possibilities of FM as a people's voice for progress and democracy are enormous. A group of FM stations, dedicated to free speech and public service, could make available to the public true consumer information rather than the hokum of commercial copywriters; could develop children's programs designed to inspire and to educate rather than to rasp the nerves of youngsters, could provide the people with public health information instead of phony patent medicine blurbs."

[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

LONDON, July 30.—Apples maturing in Somerset orchards of western England are fetching record prices. Crops from 130 orchards were auctioned at Bridgewater for $39,536 this week. One small orchard received $2,200 as compared to $1,000 last year. The Somerset apples are in demand for cider and for cooking.

If you have more radishes in your garden than you can eat, or if you have radishes so hot that you don't enjoy eating them raw, try cooking them. Steamed or boiled radishes seasoned with salt, pepper, and butter taste rather like extremely delicate young turnips. They're really good. Most persons pare the radishes before cooking as the skin sometimes gives a bitter flavor.

Ever eat pumpkin or squash blossoms? They're said to be delicious, altho I couldn't say from firsthand experience as I've never come by enough pumpkin or squash blossoms to make cooking practical. But I've collected some good recipes, which I hope some day to try, and which I shall be glad to share with any one who does have blossoms to spare. French fried pumpkin blossoms are said to be a great delicacy. Blossom salad likewise. Italian squash blossoms may be fried or made into soup.

Cook tender young carrots whole and dress them with butter or margarine, a teaspoonful or so of sugar, and the juice of half a lemon, if you want to taste something really good. Dress tender young green beans in the same way and add a sprinkling of powdered marjoram. Lemon juice will fade the beans a bit, so you'd better add the warm dressing just before carrying them to the table.

Nutmeg lore: The gypsy girl is said to use the nutmeg as a love charm. She cuts a nutmeg into four parts, throws one quarter into the river, buries a second quarter, burns the third, and boils the fourth. She then drinks the water in which the fourth section was boiled and puts the piece of nutmeg under the pillow. This guarantees her lover's fidelity. Try it some time if you happen onto a nutmeg!

There's still plenty of bacon available. The best ways to cook it are pan broiling and baking. To pan broil, cook slowly in a skillet, pouring off fat as it accumulates. See that every slice of bacon lies flat so that it cooks evenly without curling. To bake bacon, lay the slices on a rack over a dripping pan, place in a moderate oven, and bake until they are crisp. No turning is necessary. Save all of the accumulated fat to use in cooking. If there's more than you need to flavor vegetables, cook fried foods, and use in corn breads and muffins, collect the excess and turn it in to your meat dealer, who will pay you in red points and pennies.

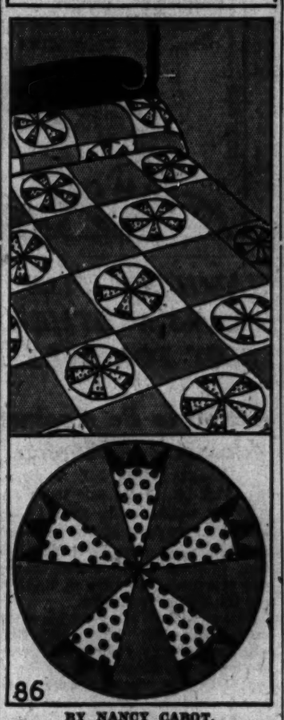
Quilt Pattern



BY NANCY CABOT.

There is a delightful and simple charm about this little quilt which comes to us from the Rocky mountains. It was inspired by the spicy pinks that grow in the nooks and crannies of the mountains. The petals are made of a dainty pink print material and tipped with soft green to simulate the natural bloom.

For the quilt pattern of the mountain pink, No. 86, send 10 cents in stamps or coin, plus 2 cents to cover mailing cost, to the Needlework Bureau, Chicago Tribune, 220 5th av., New York 1, N. Y.

Washington, D. C., July 30 (AP).—Hope that the WAVES ultimately may serve overseas was expressed tonight by Secretary of the Navy Forrestal in an address commemorating the second anniversary of the women's naval unit. Ten thousand of the 72,000 WAVES now work in this city.

Forrestal, Adm. Ernest J. King, navy commander in chief, and Adm. Chester W. Nimitz, Pacific fleet commander in chief, praised the WAVES for releasing men to serve at sea and in overseas assignments.

From Nimitz, speaking from his headquarters at Pearl Harbor came this tribute: "WAVES are busily doing jobs which help substantially in the prosecution of our war against Japan. To them will be owed a part of the credit for eventual victory. In their two years as an integral part of the navy, the WAVES have demonstrated keen ability, loyalty, and devotion to duty. We are proud of them."

King described the WAVES as "a vital part of the United States navy," and said men of the fleet "are confident that the WAVES will continue to meet every challenge."

Sally Seeking Crystal Radio and Toys for 4

BY SALLY JOY BROWN.

A case worker has requested our assistance in obtaining a coaster wagon and, if possible, a few toys for Mrs. D.'s four children. The youngest boys, 5 and 3, are very eager for such a wagon. The father has been in service for some time, and altho the mother manages well on her allowance, she has been unable to purchase any recreational material for the children. There has been much illness and hospitalization in the family, and their expenses have been heavy. Toys suitable for the other children, an 8 year old girl and a 13 year old boy, also would be welcome.

Mrs. W. sends in a rather unusual request, but one which we hope can be filled. Her hearing is almost completely gone because of a nerve and muscular condition. While she is not a complete invalid, she is past 65 and dislikes to leave her home, except for necessary errands. Her request is for an old crystal set with earphones. She feels she could hear with such a radio, and it would be a great help in passing the long lonesome hours. The address is on the south side of the city.

According to Culbertson

[Copyright: 1944: By Ely Culbertson.]

A slam was lost in this deal because one partner could not figure out just what it was that the other partner needed to know.

NORTH
♥ Q
♦ A K Q 9 6 5
♣ A 3

WEST
♠ 10 5
♥ 8 4 3 2
♦ J 8 2

EAST
♠ J
♥ A K J 10 7 6
♦ 10 4 3

SOUTH
♠ A K Q 9 4 3
♥ 9 5
♦ 7
♣ K Q 8 5

The bidding:

North	East	South	West
1 diamond	1 heart	1 spade	Pass
3 spades	Pass	4 clubs	Pass
5 clubs	Pass	5 spades	Pass
Pass	Pass

Obviously, East-West could take only one trick, a heart. Thus the 750 point slam bonus had escaped North-South.

In discussing the deal, North said that he had done all he could do when he jumped from one spade to three spades and later implied that he had the club ace by raising South's four club bid. He said that when South then bid only five spades, he [North] was afraid that South already was counting on him for something like K-x-x-x of trumps, and that his actual eight-high holding had made him fear the loss of a trump trick as well as a heart.

South answered that all this did not alter the fact that he [South] had had to fear the immediate loss of two heart tricks. He pointed out that North's bidding would have been equally sound if he had held ♠ J 10 x x ♥ x x ♦ A K Q x x ♣ A J and that with this holding the slam would be hopeless.

There was logic in both positions. The real point, however, was that North overlooked the opportunity to make a better, i. e., more revealing, bid than five clubs over four clubs. He should have bid four hearts, on the sound analysis that South could not venture to the slam without knowledge of a first or second round heart control.

DEWEY ON WAY TO SPRINGFIELD TO VISIT GREEN

Stops in Pittsburgh to See Martin Today.

BY HAL FOUST.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, July 30.—Gov. Dewey tonight boarded a special section of a train here on his first out of state trip as the Republican candidate for President.

Gov. Martin of Pennsylvania has arranged a series of conferences for the candidate in Pittsburgh tomorrow. Gov. Green of Illinois has made similar arrangements for Tuesday in Springfield. Wednesday and Thursday, the 26 Republican governors are meeting in St. Louis. On Friday, Gov. Donnell of Missouri has invited politicians and others of his state to meet Dewey.

Spends Week-end at Farm.

Dewey arrived here late this afternoon from his farm at Pawling, N. Y., and went directly to his suite in the Roosevelt hotel. It was his first visit to New York City since he was nominated. He and Mrs. Dewey dined alone. He was visited early in the evening by a few top men in the Republican national headquarters, and boarded the train a couple of hours before its departure a few minutes after midnight.

Martin, Green, and Donnell have planned programs that will give Dewey his first formal conferences with nonpolitical leaders of labor, agriculture, and industry. The subject will be post-war economy.

Will Meet Senators.

The three governors will also introduce the Republican senators, congressmen, and candidates of their states to talk about harmony between the executive and legislative branches of the federal government and about coördinating campaign efforts.

The St. Louis meeting of the 26 governors, including the Vice Presidential candidate, Gov. Bricker of Ohio, is also to discuss harmony between the federal and the state governments. The governors represent states with 339 electoral votes. A majority, enough for election, is 261.

NORMAN THOMAS ASSAILS F. D. R. FOREIGN POLICY

New York, July 30 (AP).—Norman Thomas, Socialist candidate for President, declared today that President Roosevelt's "underwriting of white supremacy in the far east and the Balkanization of Europe between Moscow and London is an invitation to new war."

The statement, coupled with other criticism of the President's domestic and foreign policies, was made in an open letter to Prof. Reinhold Niebuhr, chairman of the Union for Democratic Action, in which Thomas asked why, "this year of all years, you are supporting the Democrats."

The Socialist leader also charged that "Roosevelt has pushed no major progressive legislation since 1937."

"Before the war he had not conquered unemployment, but established it and subsidized the unemployed at a level of about 23 per cent of the workers," Thomas said. "He has no program adequate to the conquest of poverty."

INCREASE TIN SALVAGE, WPB ASKS CHICAGO

Chicago was called upon by the war production board yesterday to increase its tin can salvage to meet military requirements for hermetically sealed ammunition boxes that keep cartridge powder dry. The WPB said 500 million additional cans must be salvaged thruout the nation for this purpose.

Asserting that tin can collections in Chicago had been lagging since the first of the year, Mrs. Walter J. Kelly, chairman of the office of civilian defense division in charge of can salvage, predicted that the WPB appeal would boost local collections.

She said that the appeal is directed to housewives, as well as to hotels, restaurants, hospitals, and other institutions that have fallen behind in their salvage.

HUNT ASSAILANT WHO SHOT PRONE BOY, 15, IN BACK

Police yesterday sought an unidentified young man about 19 who earlier shot Robert Fleming, 15, of 5530 W. 64th st., during a quarrel at 63d st. and Parkside av., as he lay face down upon the sidewalk. Witnesses said the youth's assailant had made an obscene remark in the hearing of a girl Fleming had escorted to a street car. Fleming returned to protest, fled as the man fired wildly at him, and then dropped to the sidewalk pretending he had been hit. The man stood over him and shot him in the back. Fleming was taken to the Clearing hospital where his condition was said to be favorable.

HAMILTON FISH PLANS ANOTHER SUIT FOR LIBEL

Action to Be Against Maxwell Anderson.

Newburgh, N. Y., July 30 (AP).—Rep. Fish [R., N. Y.] said today his attorney would bring libel action against playwright Maxwell Anderson and other signers of an anti-Fish political advertisment which was reprinted yesterday in the Nyack [N. Y.] Journal-News.

In a statement issued at his office here, Fish said: "After conferring with my attorney, Henry Hirschberg of Newburgh, former district attorney of Orange county, I have authorized him to bring libel suits against the signers of a scurrilous and defamatory political advertisment signed by certain individuals including Maxwell Anderson of Centenary, Rockland county, chairman, and a former member of the editorial staff of the New Republic."

Accepts Anderson's Challenge.

Fish is running for nomination for reëlection to congress in the 29th district in the primary election Tuesday.

Anderson challenged Fish to start a libel action against him Friday when Anderson said he would reprint the anti-Fish ad in the Nyack paper. The ad appeared over Anderson's and 10 other signatures in yesterday's issue of the Journal-News, and Anderson asked Wendell Willkie to represent him in the event Fish brought suit.

Willkie Promises Aid.

Willkie replied in a telegram stating, "I shall count it a public service to represent you in any libel action which Hamilton Fish may bring against you growing out of his political campaign."

This will be the second libel suit growing out of publication of the anti-Fish ad. Fish filed a $250,000 libel action Friday against Robert F. Cutler whose name appeared in the advertisment when it was published originally in the Ramapo Valley Independent at Suffern, N. Y.

ELKS CONVENE TODAY TO PLAN WAR ACTIVITY

War activities of the Elks grand lodge and subordinate bodies will be stressed at the four day national war conference of the Benevolent and Protective Order of Elks, which convenes today in the Stevens hotel. Delegates will come from lodges thruout the United States.

Chief war activity sponsored by the order is the maintenance of 119 fraternal centers for service men, operated in 35 states, Alaska, and Puerto Rico.

Grand lodge officers for the coming year will be elected. Frank J. Lonergan of Portland, Ore., grand exalted ruler, will preside until his successor is named.

MAYOR BRANDS TIME MAGAZINE STORY AS LIE

Mayor Kelly said yesterday that Sen. Lucas made the decision on the final day of the Democratic national convention when the Illinois delegation, which had been supporting the senator, went into caucus and threw its support to Sen. Truman of Missouri, who was nominated for Vice President.

The mayor described as completely false Time magazine's charge he made a blasphemous statement in urging that Illinois act quickly.

"That's not true," Kelly said. "I left the whole decision to Lucas. I knew that Truman had the majority without Illinois and that he had been nominated without our votes."

His denial of the blasphemous quotation was issued at Eagle River, Wis., where the mayor reported good bass fishing and golfing.

PARTY CONTROL IN DOUBT AFTER TEXAS MEETINGS

Austin, Tex., July 30 [Special].—Control of the Democratic state convention to be held in Dallas Sept. 12 remained in doubt today as political leaders awaited full returns from conventions held yesterday in each of the state's 254 counties.

The county conventions, which named delegates to the state convention, were stormy affairs in many instances, fist fights being reported in Dallas and El Paso, and rump conventions naming rival delegations in several counties.

A tally on incomplete returns from the counties showed 93 counties had named delegates instructed to work in the state convention for a rule pledging the state's Democratic electors to vote for Roosevelt and Truman in the electoral college. Anti-Roosevelt forces controled the delegations selected in 29 counties, it was said.

ANN CURTIS SETS WORLD MARK IN 880 YARD SWIM

San Francisco, Cal. July 30 (AP).—Ann Curtis, 18 year old San Francisco girl, bettered the women's world record for the 880 yard freestyle swim today with a time of 11:08.6.

Her mark, set at the Pacific Association Amateur Athletic union meet in Fleishhacker pool, surpasses the old time of 11.16.1 by R. Hveger of Denmark, established in Stockholm in 1937.

If Miss Curtis' record is accepted officially she will be the first American girl to hold a world swimming record in more than 10 years.

Miss Curtis continued on to a new American time at 1,000 yards. She was clocked in 12:42, far under the mark of 13:23.8 set in 1931 in New York by Helene Madison of Seattle.

Stalwart and patient as one only is

Ofttimes when things get a little mixed up,
As they will in this world of today,
A little bit out of the way;
And I raise my eyes to that outspreading tree
Which has seen wars come and wars go,
And still stands serene in its meadow of green,
That all who will pause may know

That all things pass—turmoil and strife
Are man-made, hence must end,
Only those things live forever on
Which are past man's power to attend;
You'd be surprised at the things I've told
This rugged tree's gnarled old bark,
Just inside the 6th st. park!

While here, she must love all she can.

BY WILFRID SMITH.

Great Lakes Naval Training center swimmers yesterday retained their team title in the 15th annual Chicagoland 100 yard free style races in California park as Achilles Pulakos and Clyde Kemnitz won individual championships and two other Bluejackets scored in the senior division. The girls' team championship in the races sponsored by the Chicago Tribune Charities, Inc., went to the Lake Shore club by virtue of Jeanne Wilson's victory in class D and second and third places in class E.

Lake Shore scored 9 points to beat out last year's team champions, Medinah club, which yesterday finished with 7 points. Great Lakes' 14 points easily won the trophy in the boys' division altho the Bluejackets were represented by only four men, all of whom scored. Washington park boys, with second places in class A [11 and 12 years of age] and class B [13 and 14 years of age], finished second.

Pulakos Has Best Time.

Pulakos, former University of Michigan swimmer who recently took three championships in Central A. A. U. competition, coasted to an easy victory in the first heat for swimmers 17 and 18 years old. He then came back to win the class D championship with the excellent mark of :56.3, the fastest 100 yard race of the program of 16 semi-finals and 10 title events.

William Heusner Jr., of the Evanston Y. M. C. A., who was second to Pulakos in the semi-final, also finished second in the finals. Bob White of Lake Shore, a class B champion in 1941, finished third.

Kemnits Wins in Class E.

Clyde Kemnitz, who once swam for the University of Iowa and who holds the 100 meter championship for the Ozark association of the A. A. U., won the class E title. He was followed to the finish by his teammates, Charles D. Snowden, formerly of Colgate university, and Everett Turley Jr., who attended Lawrence college before enlisting in the navy.

Second best mark for the 100 yards was made by Rusty Garst of Madison, Wis., who represented the Kenosha, Wis., Youth Foundation. Garst won the class C championship in :57.8. He also won the class A title in 1941 and the class B title in 1943.

Girls Have Close Battle.

One of the closest battles for a gold medal was in the girls' class E in which Edith Miller of Medinah was the victor over Marilynn Billquist of Lake Shore.

Dorothy Schwartz brought a second individual championship to Kenosha by her victory in class C for girls 15 and 16 years of age. Ann Bresnahan of the Hinsdale Golf club, which made a surprising showing in both divisions, finished second.

GOLFERS START PAIR OF MAJOR TOURNEYS TODAY

BY CHARLES BARTLETT.

Two of the 1944 golf season's outstanding tournaments—the annual association meet of the Chicago Women's District Golf association and the 40th annual city amateur—will open this morning with 18 hole qualifying rounds, the ladies at La Grange and the amateur event at Jackson park. The C. W. D. G. A. will continue thru Friday, while the city tournament will extend thru Saturday.

The C. W. D. G. A. event marks the return of one of Chicago's best golfing shows. The association held its last such tournament on a full, match play basis at Olympia Fields in 1941, when Virginia Ingram of Sunset Ridge, who will be in today's first twosome, retired the trophy with her third victory.

The city amateur at Jackson park ranks as one of the unique tournaments in golf. Begun 40 years ago on this same Jackson park course, it has produced a number of the city's outstanding players. It was here, in 1907, that Chick Evans won his first recognized crown. He repeated in 1908 and 1911, and went to the championship match in 1942 at the age of 52. His conqueror in that battle was Harold Mathisen, the South Chicago steel chemist who has won the championship four times.

Both are entered in this week's tournament, altho, as past champions, they are exempt from qualifying. Other stars include the 1943 finalists, Champion Alex Zgorka and Lou Esposito, the runner-up; Sgt. Frank McNamara, and Earl Gocke.

The Chicago pair last night had a 2,188 sum, Flesch getting 987. Schwoegler's total was 924 and Easter's 854 for a composite 1,778.

Arlington's Race Meet to End Thursday

BY MAURICE SHEVLIN.

The Arlington Park meeting at Washington Park closes this week but not until another important stake race has been put into the records. The $15,000 added Great Western handicap will be run Wednesday, after which Washington Park will start its string of nationally important events Saturday with the $15,000 added Princess Pat stakes for 2 year olds.

Arlington's share of the meeting ends Thursday, Washington Park taking over on Friday for its 30 day session. To date there has been a 27 per cent increase in attendance over last year and a 50 per cent increase in mutuel handle.

16 Are Nominated.

Sixteen crack sprinters, headed by J. H. Rouse's Three Dots, holder of the new track record for six furlongs and ruling champion of the division, have been nominated for the 7 furlong affair.

There are 120 eligibles for the Princess Pat which has a present value of $33,980 with the starters yet to pay $500 each. The Arlington Lassie winner, Greentree farm's Expression, is not among them, but Col. C. V. Whitney has several eligible, including the stakes winner, Flyweight. He is shipping his candidates here tomorrow.

Sixty Year History.

The Great Western handicap has a brilliant history interwoven with a century of racing in Chicago. It was founded in 1884 along with the American Derby and the Sheridan and Hyde Park stakes.

SOUTH SIDERS WIN, 6-4, THEN LOSE 2D, 3 TO 0

Dietrich Turns In 12th Victory.

BY EDWARD BURNS.

The White Sox, led by Bill Dietrich, beat the Philadelphia Athletics, 6 to 4, in the first game of a double header before 16,738 yesterday in Comiskey Park. This brought them back up to .500 in the American league standings, a signal to about-face. The Chicagoans were shut out in the second game by Jesse Flores, 3 to 0. The tailend Athletics now lead the Sox, 7 triumphs to 5, in the season series; 2 games to 1 in the current seven game series.

The victory in the first game was Dietrich's 12th of the season and tied his all-time high for his 12 year major league career, set last season when he won 12 and lost 10. Johnny Humphries was the loser in the second game despite a fairly good bit of workmanship. Johnny, like the Sox, went into the game with a .500 mark—four victories and four defeats. He won 12 and lost 12 last season and had 11 and 11 the preceding season.

Dietrich Touches Off Rally.

Dietrich had a four hit performance in hand until one was out in the ninth. Then singles by Roberto Estalella and Ford Garrison and a double by George Kell lifted the hit total to seven as the A's scored their third and fourth runs on Kell's effort.

Dietrich touched off a four run rally in the third inning when he made the Sox's first hit. The Sox added the victory margin in the fifth inning when they knocked out Luman Harris.

The Sox made nine hits—seven off Harris, one off Jonas Berry, and one off Carl Scheib. Eddie Carnett and Ralph Hodgin each drove in three runs. Carnett made three singles and Wally Moses two. Hodgin and Skeeter Webb each knocked a double.

Epps Scores Two Runs Early.

Epps, second man on the A's batting list, scored two runs before the White Sox got a runner on base in the first game. He tallied in the first inning on Siebert's single, after Dietrich had passed him and Estalella and he counted again in the third on a fly after he and Hayes had singled.

Harris had retired the first eight batsmen before he encountered Dietrich with two out in the third. Bill singled to left and went to third on Wally Moses' single to right. Le Roy Schalk walked on four pitches, loading the bases, then Ed Carnett singled to right, scoring Dietrich and Moses with the tying runs and putting Schalk on third. Hodgin doubled, scoring Schalk and Carnett. Estalella then backed against the right field wall and made a one-handed grab of Trosky's smash.

Flores Never in Danger.

Moses opened the fifth with a single and raced to third when the ball got away from Estalella. Schalk walked, then Carnett again singled, scoring Moses and putting Schalk on third. After Jonas Berry replaced

WYSE, FLEMING BEAT PHILLIES, 4 TO 2 AND 11 TO 2

BY IRVING VAUGHAN.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

Philadelphia, Pa., July 30.—The humidity distressed the fifth place Cubs today, but they refused to become even slightly annoyed over the sixth place Phillies. Charley Grimm's recent refugees from the National league cellar took the front end of a double header by a modest 4 to 2 score and then developed enough violence to make a thoro job of the afternoon's program by winning the second one, 11 to 2. The net of this dual approach to success was a spot only one-half game out of the first division, and a lengthening of the victory streak to six.

The Cubs fixed Hank Wyse comfortably with a 4 to 0 lead over Charley Schanz before the half way mark was reached in the first game and it proved sufficient, even tho Wyse failed to survive the 27th putout.

Chipman Rescues Wyse.

Wyse was damaged by Elvin Adams' homer, as well as by a pass, along with an extra base hit in the sixth, but remained in action until the second out was recorded in the ninth. The tying runs were on the bases at that time and Bob Chipman lent an able hand in the clinching of Wyse's tenth victory.

In the second game, Bill Fleming succeeded in registering the sixth victory in his last seven starts. After the first inning, helped as he was in spots by brilliant fielding, he kept everything under control. Meanwhile his mates, who were somewhat different than the setup in the first game, spanked three of four Philly hurlers into the clubhouse, the unfortunates being Al [Lefty] Gerheauser, Freshman John Fick, and Dale Matthewson.

Cubs Tee Off on Schanz.

The Cubs began accumulating runs in the first game as soon as they could get to bat against Schanz. Hack opened with a single and went to third when Hughes made a similar contribution. The next three batters were stopped, but not before Schanz had helped with a wild pitch on which Hack scored while Nicholson was at bat. Hack also was involved in the third inning run. He led with a single, continued to second when Schanz messed up the throw in, and rode home on Nicholson's double.

The two fourth inning runs that proved decisive were given root by singles by Goodman and Johnson. Wyse singled to send in the former and Hughes singled to register Johnson. This was followed in the home fourth by Adams' homer to left off Wyse and the Phils' sixth inning run which grew from a pass to Adams and a triple by Wasdell. This

St. Louis, Mo., July 30 (AP).—The St. Louis Browns made good use of an opportunity to gain ground in the tight American league pennant race and won a double header from the Washington Senators today, 2 to 1 in 10 innings, and 7 to 3.

Both of the Browns' nearest rivals, the Boston Red Sox and the New York Yankees, split double headers and St. Louis picked up a full game to extend its league lead to 4½ games over second place Boston.

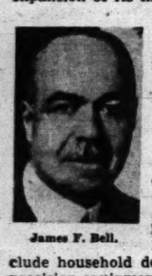
GENERAL MILLS WILL ENLARGE MACHINE SHOPS

New Lines Planned for After War.

General Mills is planning a major expansion of its mechanical departments, James F. Bell, chairman, said yesterday in the annual report to stockholders.



James F. Bell.

Growth of General Mills depends in large degree on development of new lines, Bell said. Altho he withheld details, that lines would include household devices as well as precision equipment which the company's shops are prepared to make as a result of producing intricate ordnance items was indicated.

Sales Establish New High.

For the fifth consecutive year sales set a new high, Bell reported, totaling $281,286,512 in the fiscal year ended May 31 against $217,536,414 the preceding year. However, costs of grains and other raw materials rose to $233,787,678 from $176,704,955.

Net profit was $5,556,912, equal to $6.69 a common share, compared with $5,365,945 or $6.40 a share the year before. Inventory reserves totaled $834,433 and war contingencies reserves, $590,000, against $695,449 and $210,000, respectively.

JOB REFERRALS TO HIGH RATED INDUSTRIES RISE

The number of workers channeled to jobs by the priority referral program in the Chicago labor market area increased 21.4 per cent in the week ended July 22, compared with the week ended July 8, William H. Spencer, regional war man power commission director, reported yesterday. The priority program went into effect July 1 and is designed to supply workers to industries in the order of their importance to the war.

Reports from five other major labor market areas in Illinois, Indiana, and Wisconsin showed referral increases ranging from 25.9 per cent to 288 per cent. In the first week the program operated, there were 12,438 referrals in the Chicago area, and in the week ended July 22, there were 15,099.

The increases between the two periods for the other areas follow: Springfield, Ill., 891 to 1,122, or 25.9 per cent; Indianapolis, Ind., 2,900 to 3,961, or 36.6 per cent; South Bend, Ind., 870 to 1,301, or 49.5 per cent; Madison, Wis., 341 to 1,323, or 288 per cent, and Milwaukee, Wis., 2,038 to 2,619, or 28.5 per cent.

STEEL DEMAND RISES DESPITE HOPE FOR PEACE

Cleveland, O., July 30 (AP).—Despite hopes of an early end to the war in Europe, military demands for steel continue heavy with fourth quarter requirements now in the hands of the WPB showing a substantial increase over the third quarter, the magazine Steel said today.

The principal emphasis is on merchant and naval ships and heavy shells, Steel reported, adding that combat tanks, landing mat, and truck needs are expanding and that word is expected momentarily on distribution of about 35,000 export freight cars, mainly for the army.

17,000 Idle in War Plants Thruout U. S.

[BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS.]

Labor disputes kept 17,000 industrial workers idle over the week-end and a union spokesman predicted another 7,000 would quit work today, shutting down completely five Detroit plants manufacturing parts for bomber motors. Nestor B. Dessy, president of local 235, United Automobile Workers [CIO], said 3,600 striking employes of five Chevrolet gear and axle division plants had voted yesterday not to return to work until their grievances were settled.

Because of the strike last Thursday in a dispute over production speeds, manufacture of parts for Pratt and Whitney warplane engines has been curtailed. Dessy said he expected 7,000 employes would not report for work, which would mean a complete shutdown.

Two Striking Groups to Meet.

Prospects for an early settlement of at least two other disagreements, involving 3,800 employes, hinged upon meetings today.

At Roebling, N. J., where 3,000 wire plant employes of John A. Roebling & Sons are on strike, the executive board of local 2111, CIO United Steel Workers, met to prepare for a mass meeting. At Buffalo, N. Y., 800 CIO-UAW night shift workers of the Houdaille-Hershey corporation Houde Engineering division plant arranged to meet in an effort to settle a wage dispute which started a walkout Saturday.

Charles Sage, president of the Steel Workers local 2620 at Buffalo, said 160 striking employes of the Lake Erie Engineering corporation, Kenmore, N. Y., had voted to return to work. They stopped work Friday, Sage said, "in protest over delay of the war labor board to act on their petition for wage increases."

Striking CIO Steel Workers at the Clayton Lambert Manufacturing company last night voted down by a 3 to 1 margin a proposal that they return to their jobs. Nick Conley, local president, said it was the third time the workers had voted against resuming production since the "unauthorized" strike began Saturday night, in protest of the purported discharge of a workman.

Other Walkouts Continue.

At the Anaconda Wire and Cable company's Marion, Ind., plant a walkout over reported delay on a wage increase petition affecting 1,100 AFL employes continued.

Approximately 4,300 workers at the General Steel Castings company plant in Granite City, Ill., remained idle in a dispute which arose when 300 chippers, who said they were abused by a foreman walked out.

Ball Brothers company, Muncie, Ind., involving 500 AFL glass workers.

John Harsch Bronze and Foundry company, Cleveland, O., affecting 700.

Federal Mogul corporation, San Francisco, where 100 machinists remained away from their jobs. AFL machinists union leaders said they ordered the stoppage when the local voted against more than 48 hours of work a week.

MEDICAL COST DEDUCTION.

Having suffered a machine accident, I should like to know to what extent medical expenses are deductible under the income tax law. D. D.

Answer: Certain changes affecting medical and dental expense deductions are made in the individual income tax act of 1944.

Under the prior law, such expenses for the care of the taxpayer, his spouse, or a dependent, actually paid during the taxable year, were deductible to the extent that they exceeded 5 per cent of the net income, computed without the medical expense deduction. There were other limitations.

The present act substitutes "adjusted gross income" for net income, and the change results generally in a slightly smaller credit. Under the old law, however, the deductions were not allowed in determining the victory tax but are deductible in figuring both the new 3 per cent normal tax [which replaces it] and the surtax.

The provisions are also amended to correspond with the new system of surtax exemptions. If only one surtax exemption is allowed, the maximum deduction for the taxable year must not exceed $1,250. If there is more than one surtax exemption, the maximum deduction is limited to $2,500.

The allowances include hospitalization and nursing costs. If any reimbursement was received in the form of workmen's compensation or insurance, it must be deducted from the expense.

MUTUAL SAVINGS BANK DEPOSITS, ASSETS MOUNT

New York, July 30 (AP).—Record gains in both deposits and assets in the first six months of 1944 for mutual savings institutions operating in 17 states were reported today by the National Association of Mutual Savings Banks.

The report said deposits increased $721,060,516 to bring the total of all deposits including special purpose accounts to $12,428,085,564. The gain in assets was $816,122,108 to a total of $13,858,953,776.

Depositors increased 390,524 to number 16,102,735, the first time mutual savings banks exceeded the 16 million mark. Of this number 13,101,265 represented "regular accounts."

VAST DEFERRED ROAD PLAN SET AT 4.6 BILLIONS

Half State Projects Are Surveyed.

Highway construction totaling more than 4 billion 600 million dollars is needed just to "catch up" in projects deferred because of the war, Thomas H. MacDonald, commissioner of the federal public roads administration, said in the annual directory issue of the Constructor, released yesterday by the Associated General Contractors of America.

State highway department reports as of June 1, 1944, show that surveys and preparation of plans are under way or have been completed for about half the deferred programs, he said. Remaining projects are still in the discussion stage, delayed largely for lack of engineers.

Rural Road Plans Heavy.

"The programs thus far reported by the various states include 3 billion 323 million dollars of work on rural roads and 1 billion 277 million dollars on urban routes," he said. "A breakdown of the 2 billion 216 million dollars of construction advanced to the survey or design stage shows as of June 1, 1944, plans have been completed by the state highway departments for projects to cost $214,533,000; that projects estimated at $932,512,000 are being designed, and that projects to cost $1,069,415,000 are now under survey for preparation of designs and working plans."

No immediate figures are on hand as to construction planned by cities, counties, and lesser political subdivisions when materials and labor become available for streets, highways and bridges, but it is apparent that this work also will be heavy, MacDonald said.

Finance Questions Raised.

Post-war resumption of highway construction poses several questions, he said. These involve the amount the federal government will contribute as well as other financing factors, such as motor vehicle and gasoline taxes, and the percentage which will be put to nonhighway uses.

All revenue from highway users should be directed to highway construction as long as the need exists, he said. In 1942 the net state imposts on highway users amounted to $1,275,335,000, of which 16 per cent went for nonhighway purposes.

Ceiling Hike Battle Lost, Tobacco Sales to Begin

Atlanta, Ga., July 30 (AP).—Georgia and Florida flue cured tobacco growers, beaten in a week long battle for a two cent increase in announced ceiling prices, will put the 1944 crop cigaret type tobacco on the market floors for auction sales tomorrow. Sales had been scheduled to start a week ago but 22 Georgia markets were ordered to remain closed by the state department of agriculture pending efforts to obtain higher ceilings. Two Florida markets also remained closed.

Rep. Dewey Is Off to Speed Post-War Plan

Rep. Charles S. Dewey [R., 9th Ill.] returned to Washington yesterday to attend special meetings of the house post-war committee on economic policy and planning. Speaker Rayburn asked the committee to complete its work as rapidly as possible in the event that a German collapse should bring an early end to the European war.

Dewey was the committee's special representative at the Bretton Woods [N. H.] world monetary conference. The report on his observations in three weeks there will be completed by the end of the week.

Criticizes Methods Used.

"I have seen no reason to change my position, which was not in sympathy with the procedure outlined by the conference," Dewey said. "I dislike the methods used in setting up an international monetary fund to which we make a very heavy contribution, but have only a small minority voice in voting power.

"As to the proposed world bank, I am more in sympathy with it, but think that it should have been tied in with domestic controls, such as the federal reserve system or the export-import bank."

Must Miss Illinois Parley.

The special call to Washington forced him to postpone the opening of his reelection campaign and to miss the conference at Springfield Tuesday when Gov. Dewey of New York, Republican Presidential nominee, will meet Gov. Green and other Illinois leaders.

Too frequently people wait until they are "on the spot" or "get into a jam" before thinking about borrowing money.

Of course, we make thousands of loans to meet emergencies; but we advocate the wise use of borrowed funds to avoid emergencies—"a stitch in time saves nine," as the saying goes—and a lot of useless worry.

You may borrow from $50 to $2000 or more solely on your signature—and on terms that dovetail into your own plans and purposes.

DAIRY INDUSTRY IN G. N. TERRITORY SETS PRODUCTION PACE FOR NATION

Foresight of Railway's Builders Helps Feed America Today

As the tracks of the Great Northern Railway were pushed westward from Lake Superior to the Pacific Ocean, the system's management planned for settlement and development of the Northwest empire and sensed quickly the necessity for broadening the agricultural base of the region. They knew settlers could not prosper on wheat ranching alone, so they encouraged diversification. From that encouragement grew today's great Northwest dairy industry.

In recent years Great Northern has encouraged development of industries utilizing milk. Throughout its territory are hundreds of plants devoted to production of top quality butter, condensed and powdered milk, and a variety of cheeses.

CHURCHES SEEK AMENDMENT TO INCOME TAX ACT

Fear Contributions Will Fall Off Millions.

[This is the second of a series of articles on the effect the limited deduction provisions of the new simplified income tax law will have on donations for the support of churches, charities, independent colleges, universities, and welfare institutions.]

BY THE REV. JOHN EVANS.
[Chicago Tribune Press Service.]

New York, July 30.—Churches, charities, educational and welfare institutions will lose 300 million dollars in contributions as a result of the averaged 10 per cent deduction provision in the simplified income tax law, which was signed by President Roosevelt on May 30.

The huge loss was estimated today by Charles V. Vickrey, secretary of the Council on Taxes and Philanthropy, with offices at 60 E. 42d st. The council, now seeking enactment of a corrective amendment by congress this fall, was organized by religion, education, and charity leaders to oppose the 10 per cent deduction clause.

Tells of Losing Fight.

Vickrey related the council's losing fight against the clause which lumps all usual deductible expenses such as interest, taxes, extraordinary medical care, bad debts, alimony, and charitable gifts in an automatic allowance of 10 per cent for taxpayers earning $5,000 or less. A taxpayer does not have to make church or charity contributions to take credit for the 10 per cent deduction. However, he may file his return on a long form under which he can claim deductions up to 15 per cent for contributions to church and charity.

"Few will take advantage of this option," Vickrey declared. "This will mean a further decline in the rate of giving on the part of the very people who pay 80 per cent of the churches' budgets. The people in the $5,000 or less bracket pay all but 20 per cent of the churches' bills. After a careful survey of all available data, the total loss of contributions is estimated at 300 million dollars during 1945 unless a corrective amendment to the law is passed. Our council is now coöperating with a number of congressmen and senators who believe the present bill is not final."

Leaders on Committee.

The chairman of the executive committee of the council is Dr. Guy E. Snavely, New York, executive director of the Association of American Colleges. Other members include Dr. Gould Wickey, executive secretary of the Conference of Church Related Colleges; Romain Hassrick, Philadelphia, Pa., attorney, chairman of the Northern Baptist Tax Vigilance committee; Dr. Alva V. King, general secretary of the United Stewardship council, which includes 27 Protestant denominations; the Rev. Edward V. Rooney, S. J., executive director of the Jesuit Education association, and Edward Goodell, a representative of Jewish charities.

Vickrey referred to a published statement of the council forecasting further decline in contributions for 1944 before the simplified law and 10 per cent clause goes into effect. It stated:

"This year many millions of our wage earners and small givers who heretofore have never paid 1 cent of direct taxes are being called on to pay taxes for the first time at a rate of approximately 20 per cent of their net incomes. Added to these new taxes are [a] the inescapable and irresistible demand for the patriotic investment of all savings in war bonds, [b] the increased cost of living, and [c] provision for other irreducible fixed charges of insurance, rent, medical care, and other items."

Assails 10 Per Cent Clause.

The statement assailed the 10 per cent clause:

"It is utterly unfair to give to a profligate spendthrift who seldom gives a penny to charity the same credit and tax deduction as the devout widow or the conscientious contributor who gives a tithe or sacrificially gives 15 per cent or more, in order to share with those who are less fortunate. The pastor and priest share in the deductions for the other man's alimony deductions. It savors of communism to make work simpler for the bookkeeper."

Vickrey explained that a corrective amendment would be simple. He referred to a proposal by Rep. Curtis, [R., Neb.] in the Congressional Record of March 2. It follows:

"I suggest that provision be made which grants to those taxpayers who certify that they are regular and consistent givers to religion and charity, and that they expect to give an amount in excess of 3 per cent of their net income, the right to reduce the tax base upon which the withholding tax is applied by 15 per cent, and that at the end of the taxable year, they be required to file a return on that 15 per cent of their income. This authorization may be accompanied with appropriate conditions and penalties."

Suggests Optional Statement.

Vickrey said the injustices of the average tables may be met by inincluding, on an employe's declaration to his employers, one supplementary optional statement, somewhat as follows:

"I certify that I am now contributing to tax exempt charities more than the 2 per cent [or 3 per cent] provided for in the withholding tables, and it is my purpose to contribute during the current year the amount entered herewith. I promise to render such detailed and authenticated repor. at the end of the year as the treasury department may request, paying taxes on any portion of this deduction for which satisfactory report is not rendered."

Vickrey pointed to the need for such corrective measure as an aid in reducing the sag in church contributions, alone. He cited data compiled by the United Stewardship council, representing 27 communions, showing that the proportion of income contributed to churches has declined since 1928. He attributed this decline to the increasing burden of federal taxes, rising living costs, and necessary war bond purchases.

Statistics on Contributions.

In 1928, the average church member gave his church $22.70, or 3.6 per cent of his $633 income. In the depression year of 1932, he gave $16.83, or 4.5 per cent of his $374 income. In 1936, the average church member's income had risen back to $510, but he had reduced his church contribution to $12.28, representing a proportionate drop of 2.1 per cent. In 1942, the percentage of his gift dropped to 1.8 per cent of his $841 income.

Police pursued after Jensen's automobile sideswiped two parked cars. Police said he was unable to prove ownership of the car he drove.

The Inquiring Camera Girl
BY MARYON ZYLSTRA

[The Tribune will pay $5 for each interesting question submitted by a reader and used by The Tribune. Today's question was submitted by Mustafa Kazdal of Bloomington, Ind.]

THE QUESTION.

What embarrassing mistake have you made in the English language?
WHERE ASKED.

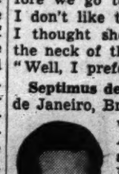
THE ANSWERS.

Enrique Bird-Pinero, Rio Piedras, Puerto Rico—I had a dinner date with a girl and I told her I knew a place where we could could get some delicious chicken. She said to me, "I'll tell you before we go to dinner I don't like to neck." I thought she meant the neck of the chicken and I said, "Well, I prefer the leg myself."

Septimus de Mendonca Clark, Rio de Janeiro, Brazil—One afternoon I was talking to an American student here at the university and I asked him if he were studying "peesecealogy." He had never heard of the subject and for about five minutes I kept repeating the word. I wrote it down. He said, "O, you mean psychology."



Betty Helfets, 5442 Harper avenue —In Germany blanket and ceiling are the same word. I went into a department store here in America and told the clerk I'd like to buy a ceiling. She stared at me. I couldn't make her understand what I wanted. When I learned what a ceiling in the English language was, I felt foolish.

Anna Ziak, 3447 Le Moyne street —My father had been in America and came to Czechoslovakia to visit us. I asked him a question and he said, "Go to hell." I didn't know what it meant. Later I came to America and my cousin met me at the dock. She said, "How are you?" I bowed politely, smiled, and said, "Go to hell."

Walter J. Levy [Germany], Fort Smith, Ark.—I had just finished writing an article for the school year book and the ink wasn't dry and I wanted to blot it. I looked around for something to blot it with but couldn't find anything. I asked a girl if she would get me a bladder. She told me why I wanted a blotter and not a bladder.

Ricardo Alegria, San Juan, Puerto Rico.—In the restaurants the waiters have trouble trying to understand me. Once I ordered grapefruit juice and they brought me a shrimp cocktail. It's always embarrassing to be misunderstood. I know what I'm trying to say but I don't always get the pronunciation right.

MUSIC FESTIVAL TO HEAR 2 SONGS BY FOUR MISFITS

'Sweet Adeline' Will Be on Program.

BY PHILIP MAXWELL.

One of America's outstanding barber shop quartets will be heard both at the Chicago Music Festival luncheon on Friday noon, Aug. 18, in the Terrace Casino of the Morrison hotel and in Soldiers' field the following night at the 15th annual festival concert. It will be the Four Misfits, finalists in the recent nationwide contest held in Detroit, Mich., by the Society for the Preservation and Encouragement of Barber Shop Quartet Singing in America, Inc.

Altho called the Four Misfits, the harmony of the four men belies their name. They will sing two numbers in Soldiers' field, "Get Out and Get Under the Moon," and "Sweet Adeline."

Composer to Be Present.

Just before Harry Armstrong, New York composer of "Sweet Adeline," places a wreath of flowers on the queen's head, the quartet will sing the verse and the chorus of that number. Then Carl Craven will lead the audience of 90,000 in its singing and the young war plant working girl will be crowned.

Ellis [Picklepuss] Perkins, baritone of the quartet, lives at 1053 Pratt blvd. and is a representative of the Petroleum Engineer magazine. The tenor, Joe [Moose] Murrin of 3340 Beach av., is a lieutenant of police at the Shakespeare station. The lead is Art [Brass Nose] Beilan of 3101 N. Troy av., a service manager of the Western Electric company. The man with the big bass voice is Pete [Butch] Buckley of 1806 Clarence av., Berwyn. He is an hydraulic engineer with the Chicago Pump company.

Will Sing Two Numbers.

The quartet will sing two numbers at the luncheon. First they will serenade the 10 "Sweet Adelines" who will be guests there. The second number will be an Indiana medley. The quartet's repertoire includes many other numbers which they may be called upon to sing. Among them are "Sweet Roses of Morn," "Dear Old Gal," "Tuck Me to Sleep," and "I've Been Workin' on the Railroad."

This evening at 6 o'clock is the deadline for all remaining entries to festival contests. All signed entry blanks should be in the Festival office on the fourth floor of Tribune Tower at that time.

MONTH'S LIQUOR MAKING TO BUILD A YEAR'S SUPPLY

Washington, D. C., July 30 (AP).—The distillers' month long holiday from war production, starting Tuesday, will bring to the consuming public about one normal year's supply of whisky and gin, liquor industry sources estimated today.

Some distillers believe the release, after 22 months of making only war alcohol, will tide them over until Germany's collapse.

The reconversion, first to be granted on an industry-wide basis, even for a limited period, is expected to provide 40 million gallons of high proof alcohol, most of which will be blended with aged spirits now in warehouses to make whisky.

Since the use of corn is forbidden, no straight bourbon will be made.

Rose Brings in a 400 Lb. Bear—and an Apology

Poplar, Mont., July 30 (AP).—Rose Marie Marchesseay, 16, rode into the hills, with a .22 rifle, hunting a bear that had been preying on her father's sheep. She came back with the 400 pound critter, but wasn't excessively proud of her feat. She had to use both of the cartridges she took along.

ARMY CHALKS UP NEW ADVANCE IN WAR ON MALARIA

Washington, D. C., July 30 (AP).—The army, acknowledging that malaria among troops has been "an important factor influencing military operations," reported today rates of the disease in highly malarious theaters now are one-quarter to one-third of figures early in the war.

The war department reported that malaria has caused much less noneffectiveness in American armies than in those of the enemy and said American casualties have been fewer than those experienced by other forces in comparabe areas.

It is the "noneffectiveness" aspect of the disease that concerns military officials. Actual deaths resulting from malaria are low—the army says the total directly attributable to malaria in 1943 was "under 100."

Overseas Rate Secret.

Because of security reasons, the statement did not give the incidence figures for overseas areas, but reported those for troops within the United States were .2 per 1,000 in 1943.

The success of the campaign against the disease has been achieved thru "thoro and widespread application of proven measures," including mosquito control, treatment of cases, and intensive research by commissions of both military and civilian scientists, the report said. A research program has been conducted for more than three years to find new anti-malarial drugs and to improve those now available.

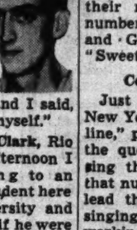
"The loss by Japanese seizure of the principal source of quinine in the Netherland East Indies has not affected the care of soldiers with malaria," the report said. "Sufficient quinine has been available for use in the special cases in which it is preferable.

Atabrine Methods Improved.

"Atabrine, especially with improved methods of use developed during the war, has been found to be fully as effective as quinine in nearly all cases. Army experience, backed by civilian studies, has shown that atabrine in many ways is preferable to quinine."

VANDALS DEFACE HOMES PAINTED BY THEIR OWNERS

Cleveland, O., July 30 [Special].—Mayor Frank Lausche said today he is prepared to use the full power of the police department to halt a wave of vandalism against homes painted by owners without "permits" from the painters' union.



Mayor Frank Lausche.

The mayor's announcement followed a city hall conference yesterday during which he told Richard Potter, business agent for the AFL painters' district council, and other representatives of the council, that he "particularly will not tolerate the condition that a property owner must obtain a permit from the union to do painting or other work on his home."

The conference was an outgrowth of a complaint to the mayor by Herbert F. Huston, a property owner, that his newly painted house had been smeared with black paint and tar. Huston said he had painted the house himself, disregarding union warnings.

Newly painted homes of other property owners have received similar treatment, according to Lausche, and other home owners have abandoned plans to paint their houses after receiving threats.

START CHICAGO TO MEXICO CITY FLIGHTS TONIGHT

Thru air line service between Chicago and Mexico City will be inaugurated at 6:10 o'clock this evening by American Airlines, Inc. The flight will operate daily at 6:10 p. m. from Chicago airport, arriving in Mexico City at 8:33 o'clock the following morning.

Emilio Almada, Mexican consul in Chicago, Commissioner of Public Works Hewitt, and other officials from the city and the air line company will gather at the airport at 5:30 p. m. to participate in ceremonies inaugurating the flight.

The plane to be used on the initial flight is the flagship "Chicago." It recently was returned to American Airlines by the army, which had used it for the last two years in various parts of the world. The crew on the first leg of the trip will be Capt. Herbert W. Susott, First Officer Earl K. Baker, and Stewardess Arlene Gabbe. Included in the cargo will be a duplicating machine, the first manufactured by the Speed-O-Craft corporation of Chicago for civilian use in the last two and a half years.

Michigan Av. Span Again Open to Motor Traffic

The Michigan av. bridge was open for nearly nine and a half hours yesterday while dredges cleared the river channel of obstacles to navigation. The dredging work was performed by the Great Lakes Dredge and Dock company. From 10:30 a. m., until 7:55 p. m., when the bridge was lowered, motor vehicular traffic was routed over other bridges.
